

TRILLIONS OF REASONS TO GET SERIOUS ABOUT OUR FISCAL FUTURE

February 25, 2010

Richard Keil is a member of Public Strategies' consulting practice group in the firm's Washington, D.C., office. He brings to this position more than 20 years of experience in journalism and public affairs. Before joining Public Strategies, Keil served as chief White House correspondent for Bloomberg News. He joined Bloomberg after 10 years as a reporter for Associated Press. Before that, he served as press secretary for an international anti-hunger organization, as a speechwriter for a District of Columbia official, and as a writer and editor for weekly newspapers in New York State.

Maya MacGuineas is the president of the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget and the director of the Fiscal Policy Program at the New America Foundation. She oversees the foundation's efforts to bring accountability to the budget process, address the challenges presented by the nation's underfunded entitlement programs, and propose comprehensive tax reforms. Before coming to New America, Macguineas was a Social Security adviser to the McCain 2000 campaign. She has also worked at the Brookings Institution and the Concord Coalition, and on Wall Street.

Rudolph Penner is an Institute fellow at the Urban Institute and has held the Arjay and Frances Miller Chair in Public Policy since 1998. Previously, he was a managing director of the Barents Group, a KPMG company. He was the director of the Congressional Budget Office from 1983 to 1987, a resident scholar at the American Enterprise Institute from 1977 to 1983, and the assistant director for economic policy at the Office of Management and Budget from 1975 to 1977. Other posts include deputy assistant secretary for economic affairs at the Department of Housing and Urban Development and senior staff economist at the Council of Economic Advisers.

Margaret Simms is an Institute fellow at the Urban Institute and director of its Low-Income Working Families project. Prior to joining the Institute in 2007, she was the vice president for governance and economic analysis at the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, where she began working in 1986. Simms was a senior research associate at the Urban Institute from 1979 to 1986 and directed its Minorities and Social Policy Program from 1981 to 1986. She taught at Atlanta University and the University of California at Santa Cruz and has written extensively about employment and training, education, and income and poverty.

Eugene Steuerle is an Institute fellow and Richard B. Fisher Chair at the Urban Institute. He has served as vice-president of the Peter G. Peterson Foundation, codirector of the Urban-Brookings Tax Policy Center, deputy assistant secretary of the treasury for tax analysis, president of the National Tax Association, and chair of the 1999 technical panel advising Social Security on its methods and assumptions. Steuerle is the author, coeditor, or editor of 15 books, including Contemporary U.S. Tax Policy and Retooling Social Security for the 21st Century.

Ruth Wooden is the president of Public Agenda. Before joining Public Agenda, she was executive vice president-senior counselor at the international public relations firm Porter Novelli, where she led the Advertising and Cause-Related Marketing Practice. From 1987 to 1999, Wooden was the president of the Advertising Council. From 1978 to 1987, she was senior vice president and managing director at N.W. Ayer Advertising in New York. Wooden serves as the board chair of Civic Ventures and as a board member of Research!America, Teachers Count, Independent Sector, and Demos.