

Why Do We Need a TJC Approach?

Focusing on reentry from jail presents an opportunity to have a significant impact: 12 million releases from jail each year.

The jail population has numerous challenges:

- 68% have a substance abuse problem.
- 60% did not graduate high school.
- 30% were unemployed at arrest.
- 16% suffer from mental illness.
- 14% were homeless in previous year.

Treatment/service capacity in jails is limited.

Reentry planning is complex:

- The jail population is highly diverse, housing pre-trial and sentenced, probation and parole violators, and local, state and federal inmates.
- Length of stay is short: 80% stay less than one month.

No designated organization or individual is responsible for facilitating transition and managing risks after release.

With 3,365 independently operated jails, policy reform is challenging.

Transition from Jail to Community is a project of

National Institute of Corrections

THE URBAN INSTITUTE
Justice Policy Center

The Transition from Jail to Community Project

For more information

Amy Solomon
The Urban Institute
asolomon@urban.org
www.urban.org

Kermit Humphries
National Institute of Corrections
khumphries@bop.gov
www.nicic.org

... to improve public safety
and reintegration outcomes

TJC Overview

The Transition from Jail to Community (TJC) project was launched in 2007 by the National Institute of Corrections (NIC). NIC and the Urban Institute are working with practitioners to develop a transition model to address how local reentry collaboratives can implement effective transition strategies.

The model will be implemented in six jurisdictions nationwide. Technical assistance tools will be developed for jurisdictions across the country.

TJC Goals

The TJC project team will work with six jurisdictions to improve public safety and enhance reintegration. Target outcomes include:

- reduced reoffending,
- reduced substance abuse,
- reduced homelessness,
- improved health,
- increased employment,
- increased family connectedness, and
- increased systems collaboration.

Transition from Jail to Community

The Project

TJC is about Systems Change

Leadership, vision, and organizational culture to set expectations and empower stakeholders and staff.

Collaboration and joint ownership by both jail and community stakeholders to develop and share responsibility for joint outcomes of interest.

Data-driven understanding of the local issue, including characteristics of the returning population and local barriers and assets.

Targeted intervention strategies to assess individuals, plan for release, and provide services and training in jail and in the community.

Self-evaluation and sustainability to guide and improve the effort.

TJC Targeted Interventions

Screening and assessment to quickly determine an inmate's risks and needs and guide transition planning and service provision.

Transition case plan development to prepare individuals for release and reintegration.

Tailored transition interventions that begin in jail and continue after release. Interventions will

- enlist multiple service sectors,
- involve community “in reach” to build relationships before release,
- utilize low-cost interventions such as reentry resource guides,
- involve informal support networks, and
- enhance the role that supervision can play, when applicable.