ENROLLING THE UNINSURED UNDER NATIONAL HEALTH REFORM

January 6, 2012

Julie Appleby, a reporter with Kaiser Health News (moderator), covers the implementation of the health care overhaul law, the interplay of health care treatments and costs, trends in health insurance, and policy issues affecting hospitals and other medical providers. Before joining KHN in 2009, Appleby spent 10 years on the health care industry and policy beat for USA Today. She has also worked at the San Francisco Chronicle, the Financial Times in London, and the Contra Costa Times in Walnut Creek, Calif. She is on the board of the Association of Health Care Journalists.

Stan Dorn is a health policy senior fellow at the Urban Institute and an expert on the Affordable Care Act (ACA), Medicaid, the Children’s Health Insurance Program, and federal programs to subsidize coverage for laid-off workers. Research by Dorn, a leading analyst of strategies for maximizing coverage among individuals who qualify for subsidies, helped shape the Express Lane Eligibility option established by the Children’s Health Insurance Program Reauthorization Act of 2009 and the ACA’s streamlined enrollment provisions. Before coming to the Urban Institute, Dorn was the health division director at the Children’s Defense Fund.

Jason Levitis is a senior adviser to the assistant secretary for tax policy in the Treasury Department’s Office of Tax Policy. He provides research, analysis, and liaison regarding tax policy, tax legislation, IRS regulations, and tax reform. Since joining Treasury in early 2009, he has played a lead role in crafting and implementing the Affordable Care Act. Before coming to Treasury, Levitis was a senior staffer at the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities and the Greater New York Hospital Association.

Penny Thompson has been the deputy director of the Center for Medicaid and CHIP Services (CMCS), within the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS), since 2009. She leads activities related to Medicaid and CHIP policy, program operations, financial management, and coordination and planning efforts for the 2014 Medicaid expansion. In 2000 and 2001, she served as deputy director and acting director of the Center for Medicaid and State Operations (now CMCS). She has been the director for program integrity at CMS and has held senior posts in the Department of Health and Human Services’ Office of Inspector General.

Mark McClellan directs the Engelberg Center for Health Care Reform at the Brookings Institution. A doctor and economist by training, McClellan was the administrator of the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services from 2004 to 2006, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration (2002–04), a member of the President’s Council of Economic Advisers and senior director for health care policy at the White House (2001–02), and deputy assistant secretary of the treasury for economic policy (1998–99). In these positions, he developed and implemented major reforms, including the Medicare prescription drug benefit, and innovative approaches to coverage in Medicaid and the State Children’s Health Insurance Program.