Career Brief

Lisa Dubay, Ph.D., Sc.M., is Senior Fellow at the Urban Institute. Dr. Dubay recently returned to the Urban Institute after being an Associate Professor at the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health and a Special Advisor in the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation.

Dr. Dubay is a nationally recognized expert on the Medicaid and CHIP programs. She is a health services researcher who has focused on evaluating the effects of public policies on access to care, health care utilization, health outcomes and health insurance coverage using quasi-experimental designs. She is currently involved in major evaluations of delivery system reform where she is a principal member of the quantitative design team for the project Measurement, Monitoring, and Evaluation of State Demonstrations to Integrate Care for Dual Eligible Individuals through CMMI. In addition, she is leading the quantitative impact analysis of the Strong Start II demonstration testing the use of alternative evidence based prenatal care delivery practices on birth outcomes for Medicaid covered women.

Dr. Dubay co-directs the Urban Institute's initiative on the Social Determinants of Health where she works with researchers across the Institute's policy centers. She has written extensively on race, income and place based disparities in health and the environments in which individuals, live, learn, work and play.
