Assessing the New Federalism

An Urban Institute Program to Assess Changing Social Policies

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH & HUMAN SERVICES · USA

Assessing the New Federalism is a multiyear Urban Institute project designed to analyze the devolution of responsibility for social programs from the federal government to the states, focusing primarily on health care, income security, employment and training programs, and social services. Researchers monitor program changes and fiscal developments. Olivia Golden is the project director. In collaboration with Child Trends, the project studies changes in family well-being. The project aims to provide timely, nonpartisan information to inform public debate and to help state and local decisionmakers carry out their new responsibilities more effectively.

Key components of the project include a household survey and studies of policies in 13 states, available at the Urban Institute's web site, http://www.urban.org.

The Assessing the New Federalism project is currently supported by The Annie E. Casey Foundation, The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, the W. K. Kellogg Foundation, The John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, and The Ford Foundation.

The authors thank Linda Giannarelli for her input and guidance during this process. The authors also thank the many state administrators for verifying the WRD data, as well as our project officer at ACF, Alan Yaffe, and our project officer at ASPE, Elizabeth Lower-Basch, for their support. In particular, the authors thank Victoria Russell and Jennifer Holland for their research assistance on this project. In addition, this paper could not have been written if not for the following past and present UI staff members who were integral to the development and continuation of the Welfare Rules Database: Wainani Au, Christine Barber, Susanne Beechey, Matthew Buettgens, Corleta Carry, Dan Dowhan, Matthew Fellowes, Jerome Gallagher, Megan Gallagher, Lloyd Grieger, Jennifer Godwin, Brian Gormley, Tara Grieshop, Amelia Gruber, Cheri Harrington, Jeffrey Krehely, Joel Ludington, Alberto Martini, Heather McCallum, Kevin McManus, Lori O'Brien, Monique Ouimette, Kevin Perese, Dorothy Preston, Tracy Roberts, Lisa Sturtevant, Keith Watson, Susan Williams, and Elisabeth Wright.

This project was funded by The Department of Health and Human Services, Administration for Children and Families and The Department of Health and Human Services, Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation.

Introduction and Background

This publication, The Welfare Rules Databook, provides tables containing key Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) policies for each state as of July 2003, as well as longitudinal tables describing selected state policies from 1996 through 2003. The tables are based on the information in the Welfare Rules Database (WRD), a publicly available, online database originally developed under the Urban Institute's Assessing the New Federalism project.

The Databook is divided into five groups of tables: initial eligibility in 2003; benefits in 2003; requirements in 2003; ongoing eligibility in 2003; and policies across time, 1996–2003. Each chapter begins with an overview of the policies, followed by details relating to specific tables.

The Databook summarizes the detailed information in the WRD. Users interested in a greater level of detail are encouraged to use the full database, available at http://anfdata.urban.org/wrd. This site includes a point-and-click interface, as well as documentation.

The following sections discuss the background and structure of the WRD, and the contents and structure of the tables in this book.

The Welfare Rules Database

The Welfare Rules Database is a comprehensive, sophisticated resource for comparing cash assistance programs across all 50 states and the District of Columbia, researching changes across time in cash assistance rules within a single state, or determining the rules governing cash assistance in one state at a point in time. The WRD is longitudinal, and currently provides information on state Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) and TANF policies from 1996 through 2003. The WRD was initially developed to meet the needs of researchers under the Urban Institute's Assessing the New Federalism project and was made publicly available in August 1999. The Department of Health and Human Services, Administration for Children and Families (DHHS/ACF) and the Department of Health and Human Services, Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation (DHHS/ASPE) are currently funding the maintenance and development of the WRD.

The Development of the WRD

The WRD was developed in response to the increasing difficulty since the early 1990s of tracking how states operate their cash assistance programs for needy families. Under AFDC, the structure of eligibility and benefit computation was mostly determined at the federal level. States were allowed to set certain policies—such as the standards used to establish eligibility and benefits, and the rules for two-parent families—but those choices were detailed in the State Plans they submitted to DHHS/ACF, and in annual reports issued by DHHS/ACF summarizing the State Plans. In the early to mid-1990s, as more states received waivers to experiment with their welfare rules, it became increasingly difficult to research states' policies. The Waiver Terms and Conditions agreed to by the state and the federal government often did not provide full implementation details, and the implementation schedules often changed after the agreement was reached. The August 1996 passage of the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act (PRWORA), replacing AFDC with the TANF block grant, further increased both the degree of variation across state programs and the difficulty of tracking program rules.

Currently, states are periodically required to submit to the federal government TANF State Plans that provide an overview of their choices under the block grant. However, the Plans' level of detail varies considerably across states and they generally offer insufficient information to completely understand the details of eligibility, benefit computation, and client requirements.

Further, although states are expected to notify the federal government if any of their choices change after the submission of a Plan, they are not required to do so.

The WRD was developed to provide a source of detailed information about states' TANF policies, going beyond the level of detail in most states' official State Plans and capturing changes in policies that occur between the submission of those Plans. The WRD focuses on cash assistance policies and some closely tied transitional benefits. Its main focus is federally funded policies; however, some information on policies provided under state-separate funding is included when those benefits are considered part of the same basic program by the state and are therefore included in the caseworker manual. Thus, benefits paid to two-parent units and certain immigrant units are included, even when they do not use federal funds. The WRD does not attempt to capture other uses of federal TANF funds (such as state earned income tax credits, child care programs, etc.).

Contents of the WRD

The WRD provides detailed information on a wide range of policy topics. These topics are currently organized into 29 categories that together describe most of the significant dimensions of state policies. While the categories may be ordered in various ways, it is useful to consider the rules in the sequence in which individuals seeking and receiving assistance will likely encounter them. The 29 categories are listed below, organized into five sections, beginning with initial eligibility.

I. Initial Eligibility

A. Does the state try to divert some families from becoming recipients?
Diversion

B. How does family composition or individual status affect eligibility?
Eligibility by Number/Type of Parents
Eligibility of Units Headed by a Minor Parent
Eligibility of Pregnant Women
Employment-Related Eligibility of Two-Parent Families
Eligibility of Individual Family Members
Inclusion of Noncitizens in the Unit

C. What level of assets can a family have and still be eligible?
Asset Test

D. How is income counted in determining eligibility?
Countable Income
Income and Assets of Children
In-Kind Income
Deemed Income
Child Support
Earned Income Disregards

E. How much income can a family have and still be eligible?
Income Eligibility Tests
Dollar Amounts[1]

II. Benefits

A. If a family passes all eligibility tests, what is received?
Benefit Computation[2]

III. Requirements

A. Once determined eligible, what must a recipient family do to maintain benefits?
Contracts and Agreements
School Policies for Dependent Children
Immunization and Health Screening Requirements
Child Support Sanctions[3]

[1] The information in the Dollar Amounts category is also relevant to other categories, including Deemed Income, Income Eligibility Tests, and Benefit Computation.
[2] Most states base benefits on the net income of the recipient. Net income is calculated by determining the gross income of a recipient and subtracting any earned income disregards the state may allow. Therefore, the Earned Income Disregard category is also relevant for benefit determination.
[3] The child support requirements for which a recipient may be sanctioned are included in the Child Support category

B. What work activities are required?
Activities Exemptions
Activities Requirements
Activities Sanctions
Minor Parent Activities Requirements and Bonuses Components

IV. Ongoing Eligibility

A. How long can a family receive benefits?
Time Limits

B. Are children eligible if born while the family receives benefits?
Family Cap

Note: The categories under sections I.B–I.E and II may be relevant to ongoing eligibility. In most states, recipients are also required to pass nonfinancial and financial tests in order to continue receiving benefits. These tests may differ for initial and ongoing eligibility.

V. Transition to Self-Support

Sources of Information for the WRD, and Verification of the Data

The primary sources of information for the WRD (and thus for the tables in the Databook) are the caseworker manuals and/or regulations used in each state and the District of Columbia.[4] The Urban Institute has a subscription with each state to obtain the manuals or regulations as well as the ongoing updates to those manuals or regulations. These documents provide a consistent source of detailed information on policy changes and implementation dates across states and time.

listed under section I.D.

[4] Owing to the difficulty of obtaining caseworker manuals during the transition from AFDC to TANF, the 1996 data in the WRD are coded using several different sources, including (a) caseworker manuals, when available; (b) AFDC State Plans submitted by states to the federal government; (c) waiver terms and conditions; and (d) telephone calls to states to clarify the implementation dates of waivers.

States were given the opportunity to verify the key polices in the 2003 Databook tables. The 45 states that reviewed the Databook tables are:

Alaska	Indiana	Nebraska	South Carolina
Arizona	Iowa	Nevada	South Dakota
Arkansas	Kentucky	New Hampshire	Tennessee
California	Louisiana	New Jersey	Texas
Colorado	Maine	New Mexico	Utah
Connecticut	Maryland	New York	Vermont
Delaware	Massachusetts	North Carolina	Virginia
D.C.	Michigan	North Dakota	Wisconsin
Florida	Minnesota	Oklahoma	Wyoming
Hawaii	Mississippi	Oregon
Idaho	Missouri	Pennsylvania
Illinois	Montana	Rhode Island

A similar verification process was performed in the last four years for the 1999, 2000, 2001, and 2002 data. In those rounds of verification, 44 states reviewed the complete 1999 data or the 1999 tables, 46 states reviewed the complete 2000 data or the 2000 tables, 45 states reviewed the 2001 tables, and 46 states reviewed the 2002 tables. Portions of the 1996–98 information in the WRD have been verified against selected secondary sources but have not been fully reviewed by state TANF staff because of their historic nature.

General Points about the WRD

The WRD

- contains information on the cash assistance rules in effect in each state across time. It does not include information on proposals or legislation that has not been implemented.

- focuses on welfare rules. The database does not contain information regarding caseloads, budgets, outcomes, or administrative practices.

- contains at least one "record" (a set of coded variables) for each state, year, and category of rules.

- contains additional records when the state changes a policy during the year or when the state's policies vary by geographic regions of the state, demographic characteristics of the assistance units, or "component" groups across the state. (The term "component" is used when the state's caseload is divided into mutually exclusive groups based on multiple characteristics.)

- indicates when states vary policies by county. For those policies determined at the county level, the WRD captures the policies for the largest county in the state.[5]

- for every year, state, and category of rules contains one record that is designated the "majority rule" record. This record represents the policy that affected the majority of the caseload for the majority of the year.

It is important to note that neither the WRD nor the Databook addresses the issue of how rules may be implemented in practice. As noted above, the WRD is based on caseworker manuals and regulations, which typically do not include information on the likelihood of various outcomes. For instance, if a particular type of recipient may be assigned to one of several work activities, the manuals do not typically address the issue of which activity is the most likely assignment. Thus, for certain policies, two states may look quite similar in the database and yet in practice be quite different, and other states' policies may look quite different and yet be similar in practice.

[5] The states that allow counties to vary policies (that are included in this book) are California, Colorado, and Ohio. The largest counties in each state are Los Angeles County in California, Denver County in Colorado, and Cuyahoga County in Ohio.

The Databook

Content of the Databook

The descriptions of the policies in this Databook should be considered from the point of view of the individuals and families to whom the policies apply. The book describes the rules that affect individuals and families in each state, but generally does not specifically identify whether those policies are imposed due to federal or state requirements. Thus, this book does not provide an exhaustive description of federal requirements or prohibitions. Unless a specific policy could not be fully discussed without identifying that the policy stemmed from a federal regulation, the federal versus state distinction is not mentioned. For example, in the case of time limits, it is difficult to fully explain TANF time limit policies without discussing the federal government's 60-month limit. However, in most instances we simply state the policies and do not discuss which level of government (federal versus state) institutes the specific requirements.

The tables included in this book are designed to provide readers with easy access to key TANF policies across states as of July 2003. The first four chapters of the Databook provide information as of July 2003 across four broad policy areas: initial eligibility, benefits, requirements, and ongoing eligibility. For selected policies, longitudinal tables include data from 1996 through 2003.

The data for the tables are extracted from the WRD and represent only a portion of the overall information in the database. Even for the policy areas addressed in this book, further details are available online in the WRD. In general, the Databook tables focus on the "majority rule" (the policy that affects the majority of the state's caseload for the majority of the year) for a particular aspect of policy, while the online database allows exploration of policy variations across months of the year and different subsets of the caseload.

For more information about which WRD variables are required for each table, see the WRD web site. The web site includes a link to the “Creation of Databook Variables” document. This document lists the WRD variables used for each Databook table and provides information on how to construct the Databook variables.

Structure of the Tables

Each table follows the same general structure and was created using the same set of general rules. Typically, the body of each table includes one row per state, which represents the policies that affect the majority of the caseload as of July 2003. Units comprising the majority of the caseload tend to be nonexempt, single-parent units with children.

Some tables include more information than just the rules for the majority of the caseload. In some cases, the information is represented as an additional row for the state, whereas other types of information are included as footnotes.

- Additional data as a second row: A second row is added to the body of the table if a state divides its entire caseload into mutually exclusive groups that are treated differently across more than one policy. These groups—termed “components” in the WRD—are usually defined by more than one characteristic, such as “units containing a child under 13 years old whose unit head is job ready.” Descriptions of states’ components are located in appendix 1.
- Additional data as a footnote: Several types of variations may appear as footnotes in the tables. These include variation by type of assistance unit (two-parent units versus one-parent units or applicants versus recipients) or geographic areas (demonstration projects in a few counties versus the rest of the state). In some, but not all, tables these types of policies are footnoted. The tables do not capture all the variation in policies across regions and types of units, but the WRD contains this information. In addition, states that allow counties to vary policy are footnoted. The footnote indicates the name of the county (the largest in the state) to which the policy applies.

Each 2003 table is numbered by chapter and section. For example, table III.A.1 refers to the first table in chapter III, section A. The longitudinal tables are numbered L1 through L10. The numbering of the tables in this book corresponds to the numbering of the tables in the 1999 through 2002 books. Note that several tables have been added to or changed in the 2003 book.

Table IV.A.5, “Ongoing Eligibility Threshold for a Family of Three,” was added to the ongoing eligibility section of the book. This new table describes the maximum earnings a family during various months of receipt can receive and still remain eligible for assistance. The structure and content of table IV.A.2, “Treatment of Child Support Income for Recipients,” has changed in the 2003 Databook. The table now draws a distinction between how child support income is counted for eligibility purposes versus benefit calculation purposes. The structure of table II.A.2, “Benefit Determination Policies,” has also changed. To make the table easier to read, parentheses have been added to indicate the order of operations in the benefit formulas. Finally, to help the user more easily identify changes in policies across time, changes in policies from one year to the next have been bolded in all the longitudinal tables.

Policies as of July 2003

Initial Eligibility

I. Initial Eligibility

The tables in this chapter of the Databook describe key aspects of the rules imposed on families and individuals in order to determine initial eligibility for TANF cash assistance, as of July 2003. Rules for initial eligibility apply to individuals who are newly applying or reapplying for assistance. To be eligible, an applicant family must pass both nonfinancial tests based on the demographic characteristics of the family and its members, and financial tests based on the income and asset holdings available to the family. This chapter is divided into five sections covering initial eligibility rules related to diversion, family composition, assets, income definitions, and income tests.

A. Does the state try to divert some families from becoming recipients?

During the 1990s, first under state waivers and then after the passage of PRWORA, states began focusing their efforts on decreasing caseloads, as well as encouraging families to become self-sufficient. To meet these goals, many states developed policies that attempt to divert from assistance those applicants needing the least amount of state help to become self-sufficient.

Two policies intended to encourage self-sufficiency are diversion and job search at application. By July 2003, well over half of all states had created a formal diversion program. Under formal diversion programs, families may choose to receive a lump-sum cash payment to deal with immediate needs instead of receiving a monthly TANF benefit. Generally, the benefits are provided to families to alleviate short-term problems that interfere with either keeping or finding employment. Families that accept diversion payments are typically barred from applying for monthly TANF benefits for some period.

About a third of the states have instituted a job search at application policy, which encourages applicants to find work. These policies require applicants to search for a job either before or while their application is processed. To be eligible for aid, applicants must prove that they have searched for a job at a set number of businesses. States hope that applicants who may not have previously pursued employment as aggressively as the state required will find a job and no longer need assistance.

Below is a further discussion of these topics and the tables included in this section.

Formal diversion: Table I.A.1 describes states' formal diversion programs. For purposes of the WRD and this table, a formal diversion program diverts eligible applicants or recipients from ongoing TANF receipt by providing a one-time cash payment paid directly to the family or to a vendor for expenses incurred by the family. Other strategies that states may use to divert applicants from ongoing receipt of cash benefits (such as requiring an applicant to participate in job search or resource and referral services) are not identified as diversion programs in the table.

Families applying for a diversion payment must still be eligible for assistance using the state's eligibility rules (see sections I.B–I.E). The rules are generally the same for families that apply for diversion and those that apply for monthly assistance.

The amount of a diversion payment varies greatly across the states. Currently, 11 states (including 2 states with variable lump-sum payments) provide families a flat lump-sum amount of diversion, regardless of the family's size. These payments range from $1,000 to $4,000, depending on the state. The majority of states with diversion programs, however, determine the lump-sum diversion payment amount based on a multiple of the benefit the family would receive if it were eligible and received monthly TANF payments. The diversion payments range from two to eight months' worth of monthly benefits, depending on the state. The majority offer up to three months of the maximum benefit the family would receive if receiving assistance. Note that the maximum diversion amount in these states is also affected by the variation in the states' maximum monthly benefit levels and the family size.

Table I.A.1 describes whether states provide a diversion payment, the maximum payment, the form of the payment, how often a recipient may receive the maximum payment, the period of TANF ineligibility after receiving a diversion payment, and whether the diversion payment counts toward the state's time limit. States conducting demonstration projects that provide diversion assistance in a few counties, but not statewide, are footnoted.

Related tables: Table L1 indicates whether each state had a formal diversion program in 1996 through 2003.

Mandatory job search at application: Table I.A.2 indicates which states require applicants to search for a job before application as a condition of eligibility. Presently, 17 states require an applicant to seek employment either before or while the application is processed. The job search requirements vary by state, but in all cases the family is not eligible for assistance if the applicant does not comply with the requirement.

B. How does family composition or individual status affect eligibility?

To be eligible for either a diversion payment or monthly benefits, a family must pass several nonfinancial tests based on the demographic characteristics of the overall family or individuals within the family. States impose several rules on families to determine whether they may be eligible for TANF. At the most basic level, the family must include a child or, in some states, a pregnant woman. If the family includes two parents, some states impose special eligibility tests based on the parents' current or prior labor force status. If the head of the family is a teenager, she may or may not be eligible to receive a benefit on her own, and in most states she is eligible only if she is living with her parents or in another state-approved setting.

Even when a family passes these tests, some members of the family may not be eligible to be part of the "assistance unit" (the group of people whose needs are considered in establishing the benefit). For instance, many states prohibit the inclusion of stepparents in the assistance unit, while other states require their inclusion, and still others give the family the option. The degree to which individual noncitizens are eligible to be in the assistance unit also varies from one state to the next. States base the eligibility of noncitizens on several factors, including when they arrived in the country, how long they have resided in the country, and their immigrant status.

Below is a further discussion of these topics and the tables included in this section.

Eligibility of pregnant women: Table I.B.1 indicates whether pregnant women who have no other children are eligible to receive TANF cash assistance. For those states that provide benefits, the table also indicates in which month of pregnancy benefits begin.

Two-parent eligibility for applicants: For states providing benefits to two-parent families, table I.B.2 describes any special eligibility rules imposed on two-parent applicant units where neither parent is disabled ("UP," or unemployed-parent families, in the former AFDC program).[6] The three tests that are sometimes imposed are limits on hours of work, work history tests, and waiting periods. Under an "hours test," the unit is ineligible if the principal wage earner is working more than a specified number of hours a month. Note that states may apply this rule when determining the initial or continuing eligibility of two-parent families.

Under a work history test, the eligibility of two-parent units is restricted to those where the principal wage earner worked during a certain number of calendar quarters over a specified number of years, or where the principal wage earner satisfies other criteria related to labor force attachment.

Waiting periods restrict the eligibility of two-parent families until a certain number of days or weeks after the family would otherwise have been eligible.[7] In other words, under a 30-day waiting period, if the principal wage earner becomes unemployed and the family would not have been eligible when the parent was working, the family would not become eligible to apply for assistance until one month after the parent lost his or her job.

Related tables: See table IV.A.1 for details on the hours test for recipients and table L2 for information on the rules for two-parent units in 1996 through 2003.

Minor parent eligibility: Table I.B.3 describes special eligibility rules for families where the parent is a minor (usually defined as under age 18 and never married). The first column indicates whether a minor parent can ever head a TANF unit and receive the benefit check in his or her own name. The second column indicates whether the state requires the minor parent to live with a parent or in another state-approved setting (referred to in the table as a living arrangement restriction). In nearly all states, unless exempt due to good cause, a minor parent must live with her own parent(s) or in some other state-approved setting.[8]

Related tables: See table I.D.1 for the rules related to the treatment of income from the parents of a minor parent who is heading her own assistance unit.

Eligibility of stepparents: Table I.B.4 describes whether a stepparent is included in the TANF assistance unit. Depending on the state policy, stepparents may be required to be part of the unit, may be prohibited from being part of the unit, or may be included in the unit at the [7] Historically, waiting periods were only imposed on two-parent units. However, under TANF, some states have begun to apply waiting periods to all types of units. The WRD does not currently capture waiting periods that apply to all units.

[8] In general, states may not provide federally funded assistance to minor parents who are not living in an adult-supervised setting. However, there are some exceptions to this requirement.

option of the family. This table focuses on rules for stepparents who have no child in common with their spouses and who have no biological children of their own in the assistance unit. State rules for stepparents not meeting these criteria may vary and are discussed in the WRD.

Related tables: See table I.D.2 for the rules related to the treatment of income from a stepparent who is not included in the assistance unit.

Eligibility of noncitizens: After the passage of PRWORA, noncitizens' access to federal TANF benefits was significantly restricted. PRWORA created the "qualified alien" distinction, which more narrowly defined the group of noncitizens potentially eligible for most federally funded TANF assistance.[9] Apart from a few exempted groups, the federal law further limited qualified aliens' access to assistance based on their date of entry into the country.[10] Qualified aliens who entered the United States before August 22, 1996, (the date PRWORA was passed) are potentially eligible for assistance without any waiting period, whereas certain qualified aliens who arrive in the country on or after August 22, 1996 are subject to a five-year bar on federal TANF assistance.[11] (If the alien enters the United States on or after August 22, 1996, but is not qualified when he or she enters, the five-year clock begins on the date his or her immigrant status becomes qualified.) After the five-year bar, qualified aliens are again potentially eligible for federally funded TANF assistance. Although federal law determines which aliens are potentially eligible for benefits and during which periods, states have some flexibility. States can provide or

[9] Qualified aliens include legal permanent residents, asylees, refugees, aliens paroled into the United States for at least one year, aliens whose deportations are being withheld, aliens granted conditional entry, certain battered alien spouses and their children, battered alien children and their parents, Cuban/Haitian entrants, and aliens granted conditional entry before April 1, 1980.

[10] The federal law exempts several groups of aliens from the five-year bar. They are refugees and asylees, individuals who had their deportation withheld, veterans or individuals in active duty along with their spouses and unmarried dependent children, Cuban/Haitian entrants, and certain Amerasians.

[11] The five-year bar applies only to those aliens who entered the United States—whether legally or illegally—on or after August 22, 1996. Therefore, a person may have entered illegally in 1994 and became a legal permanent resident in 2000. As long as that person has been continuously present in the United States, the bar would not apply to him or her. See the Department of Justice's Interim Guidance on Verification of Citizenship, Qualified Alien Status and Eligibility under Title IV of PRWORA at 62 Federal Regulation 61415 (November 17, 1997).

deny assistance to certain qualified aliens who the federal government has indicated are potentially eligible for benefits.[12] States can also provide state-funded assistance to certain aliens ineligible for federally funded assistance—such as qualified aliens during the five-year bar or certain unqualified aliens.

States have made three types of decisions about the eligibility of aliens: (1) Will some of or all qualified aliens who arrived before PRWORA (pre-PRWORA) be eligible for benefits?; (2) Will some of or all aliens who arrived after PRWORA (post-PRWORA) be eligible for benefits during the five-year bar?; and (3) Will some of or all post-PRWORA aliens be eligible for benefits after the five-year bar? As of 2003, all states provide TANF benefits to at least some of, if not all, pre-PRWORA qualified aliens. But states vary considerably in their decisions concerning post-PRWORA aliens. Tables I.B.5, I.B.6, and I.B.7 describe the variation in state policies concerning pre-PRWORA and post-PRWORA aliens.[13]

Table I.B.5 describes whether states consider pre-PRWORA qualified aliens eligible for federally funded assistance. The table provides eligibility rules for several different categories of qualified aliens, including legal permanent residents, asylees/refugees, aliens with deportation withheld, aliens paroled in the country for at least one year, and battered aliens. Even if a state does not provide assistance to all qualified aliens, those qualifying for special exceptions based on work history or veteran or military status are still eligible for federally funded benefits.

[12] States must provide benefits to veterans or individuals in active duty along with their spouses and unmarried dependent children and legal permanent residents with 40 qualified quarters of work who have not received any federal means-tested benefits during any quarters beginning after December 1996 (40 quarters is approximately 10 years for one person; however, an alien may be credited with quarters of coverage worked by a parent or a spouse under certain circumstances). The five-year bar on federal benefits does apply to legal permanent residents even if they accumulate 40 quarters, however.

[13] These state rules must be viewed in the context of the federal prohibitions and requirements affecting the eligibility of noncitizens for federally funded assistance. The eligibility rules for noncitizens are very complex. This discussion is a summary intended for researchers and should not be used for assessing the policy options available to a state under federal law or whether particular state policies fully comport with federal law.

Table I.B.6 shows the extent to which states use their own funding to provide assistance to post-PRWORA qualified aliens during the five-year bar. (The table also indicates state-funded coverage of certain groups of nonqualified aliens.) Some states fund all qualified aliens, while others fund only legal permanent residents or particular groups of post-PRWORA aliens.

Table I.B.7 shows whether states consider post-PRWORA qualified aliens eligible for federally funded assistance after they have resided in the United States with a qualified alien status for at least five years. The table provides eligibility rules for several different categories of qualified aliens—legal permanent residents, asylees/refugees, aliens with deportation withheld, aliens paroled in the country for at least one year, and battered aliens. Even if a state does not provide assistance to all qualified aliens, those qualifying for special exceptions based on work history or veteran or military status are still eligible for federally funded benefits.

All noncitizen rules discussed here apply to individuals, not to entire families. Within a family, some individuals may be ineligible based on immigrant status, while others may remain eligible. The WRD provides details on the extent to which income of these ineligible family members is available to the eligible individuals in the unit. The WRD also provides information on income deemed from an alien's sponsor.

C. What level of assets can a family have and still be eligible?

If the family passes the nonfinancial eligibility tests, the state then calculates the amount of assets the family owns. Almost all states restrict the amount of assets a family may hold and still be eligible for assistance; however, these amounts vary greatly by state and by type of asset.

If the family's total assets exceed the amounts determined by the state, the family is ineligible for assistance.

Asset limits for applicants: Table I.C.1 describes each state's asset tests for applicants. States determine the maximum value of assets, including vehicles, an applicant family may hold and still remain eligible for benefits.

The first column of the table provides the limit on the value of unrestricted assets a family may hold and still be eligible for assistance. Unrestricted assets include the cash value of any asset the state counts toward the limit, regardless of the asset's purpose.

The second column describes whether some of or all the value of a vehicle is excluded in determining the amount of a family's assets for eligibility purposes. When a portion of the vehicle's value is exempted, that value may be given in terms of equity or fair market value. The fair market value is the amount for which the vehicle could be sold, while the equity value is the fair market value minus any amount still owed on the vehicle. When a family still owes money on a vehicle, the equity value will be less than the fair market value, so this distinction is important when comparing vehicle exemption amounts across states.

Related tables: The limits may vary for determining the initial eligibility of applicants versus the continuing eligibility of recipients. For information on the asset test for recipients, see table IV.A.3. Tables L8 and L9 provide information on asset limits for recipients and the vehicle exemption for recipients, respectively, from 1996 through 2003.

D. How is income counted in determining eligibility?

Once a family has passed the state's asset tests, its available income is computed for eligibility purposes. States have discretion in determining the portion and types of earned and unearned income they will count, in addition to whose income will count, for eligibility purposes. Generally, states count most of the earned income from each assistance unit member toward the unit's gross income (total income of the unit); however, states vary greatly in their treatment of unearned income. There are several types of unearned income; this book only addresses unearned income in the form of child support payments (in chapter IV, Ongoing Eligibility). For more details on the treatment of other unearned income, including interest income, EITC income, and lump-sum income, see the WRD.

States determine not only how much and what type of income is counted, but also whose income is counted. Many states count a portion of or all income from certain individuals who have an obligation to support a member of the assistance unit but are not themselves part of the unit. For instance, as long as a nonapplicant—such as a stepparent or a parent of a minor parent—lives in the same home as the applicant, a portion of the nonapplicant's income may be counted against the applicant for eligibility and benefit computation purposes. Typically, states allow these individuals to allocate a portion of their income for their own needs, while any remaining income is "deemed available" to the assistance unit as unearned income. This income may or may not actually be available to the unit, but the state assumes the individual bears some financial responsibility and therefore requires that a portion of his or her income count against the unit.

Below is a further discussion of these topics and the tables included in this section.

Treatment of grandparent income: When a minor parent is potentially eligible to head her own assistance unit, a portion of her parents' income may be "deemed available" to the minor's unit when determining eligibility and benefits. Typically, income is deemed from the minor's parents (referred to as "grandparents") only if the minor is living in the home with her parents; however, in one state—New Jersey—the income is deemed even if the minor is not living with her parents.

Generally, states allow the grandparents an initial disregard(s), similar to the earned income disregards available to applicants. In addition, the grandparents may subtract from their income a second disregard approximating the amount of their basic needs and the needs of their dependents. The income that remains after these disregards is deemed available to the minor unit as unearned income and is counted for eligibility and benefit computation.

Table I.D.1 describes the deeming process for grandparents' income. The first column indicates if the state deems income, the second column indicates the initial earned income disregard available to the grandparents, and the third column describes any other disregards available to the grandparents (most often referred to as the need-based disregard). The table indicates the income standards used by states to determine the disregard. To determine the value of these standards for a family size of three, see table I.E.3 (Eligibility Standards).

Related tables: Table I.B.3 describes whether minor parents are potentially eligible to head their own TANF units.

Treatment of stepparent income: In states where a stepparent is either always excluded from the assistance unit or may choose to be excluded from the assistance unit, a portion of the stepparent's income may be "deemed available" to the unit. As with grandparent deeming, states generally allow the stepparent an initial disregard(s), similar to the earned income disregards available to applicants. In addition, the stepparent may subtract from his or her income a second disregard approximating the amount of his or her basic needs and the needs of his or her dependents. The remaining income after these disregards is deemed available to the stepparent's spouse and the spouse's dependents as unearned income and is counted for eligibility and benefit computation.

Table I.D.2 describes the deeming process for stepparents' income. The first column indicates if the state deems income, the second column indicates the initial earned income disregard available to the stepparent, and the third column describes any other disregards available to the stepparent (most often referred to as the need-based disregard). The table indicates the income standards used by states to determine the disregard. To determine the value of these standards for a family of three, see table I.E.3 (Eligibility Standards).

Related tables: Table I.B.4 describes whether stepparents are potentially eligible to be included in the assistance unit.

E. How much income can a family have and still be eligible?

To determine initial eligibility for benefits, most states impose income eligibility tests on applicants. States use the total gross income calculated from the unit's earned and unearned income as a starting point for these tests. Many states currently impose one income test on applicants; however, others use a combination of tests, which may include a gross income test, a gross earnings test, an unearned income test, or a net income test. There are other tests, but these are the most common. A gross income test compares all the unit's total income (earned and unearned) with a state-determined standard. If the unit's income is less than the standard, the next test is applied, if there is one, or the unit is considered eligible and a benefit is computed. A gross earnings test and an unearned income test both work similarly; however, only the unit's earned income is used for a gross earnings test and only the unit's unearned income is used for an unearned income test.

States may also impose net income tests, either after a gross income test or in lieu of it. Net income is calculated by subtracting the state's earned income disregards from the unit's gross earned income and then adding to this amount the unit's unearned income. The net income is then compared to an income standard determined by the state. If the net income is less than the standard, the next test is applied, if there is one, or the unit is considered eligible and a benefit is computed.

The following sections describe the types of eligibility tests in the states, the earned income disregards used for the net income tests, the income eligibility standards used for the various tests, and a calculation for the maximum income for initial eligibility at application. The first three tables must be used together to fully understand the income eligibility tests in each state.

Income eligibility tests for applicants: Table I.E.1 describes states' income eligibility tests for determining whether an applicant can begin receiving benefits. The table indicates which state income standard is used for each test. To determine the value of the particular standard for a three-person family, see table I.E.3, discussed below. States that impose a net income test generally disregard a portion of the unit's earned income before comparing the income to the state's income standard. These earnings disregards are captured in table I.E.2.

This table describes the income tests imposed in addition to the implicit income test imposed by benefit computation. Even if a family passes all eligibility tests, it is possible in some states that the family will not qualify for a positive benefit under that state's benefit computation formula. In those cases, the family will not receive a benefit. Some states have streamlined their eligibility policies and do not perform any income tests other than the implicit test imposed by the benefit computation procedure. In those states, table I.E.1 indicates "No explicit tests."

Related tables: As mentioned above, table I.E.3 provides the eligibility standard(s) used to determine eligibility for a three-person family. Tables I.D.1 and I.D.2 describe policies concerning the deeming of income from grandparents and stepparents that may be used when determining gross income for income eligibility tests. Table I.E.2 describes the earned income disregards that may be used for net income tests. Table I.E.4 combines information on the income eligibility tests applied to applicants with information on the earned income disregards and eligibility standards to show the maximum earnings a family can have and still be eligible for TANF. Table L3, in the last section of this book, provides the same information as in table I.E.4 for 1996 through 2003.

Earned income disregards for income eligibility: Table I.E.2 describes the earned income disregards applied to applicants' and recipients' income in determining net income for the income eligibility tests. Additional disregards for child care expenses paid by a family or special disregards for units affected by a family cap or time limit are not included in this table; however, this information is included in the WRD.

The body of the table focuses on the earned income disregards used to establish net income when determining an applicant's initial eligibility. In some cases, states also use net income tests to determine a recipient's continuing eligibility. If that is the case, and if different earned income disregards are used in applying net income tests for recipients versus applicants, the rules for recipients are footnoted.

When a state has no explicit net income tests, the table indicates "No explicit net income test." Some states have net income tests but do not apply any earned income disregards to the applicant's earnings. In other words, all of a family's earnings are typically included in the income amount. In those cases, "No disregards allowed" appears in the table.

Eligibility standards: As described earlier, most income tests involve state-established income amounts that vary by the size of the assistance unit. The WRD includes the standards used for each family size from 1 through 12. Table I.E.3 provides the standards for a three-person assistance unit.

The table identifies the standard by the name used in the caseworker manual. Under the former AFDC program, the standard for income eligibility tests was the need standard. However, because of the complexity of state programs, identifying the need standard is no longer clear. States may compare an assistance unit's income against multiple standards, depending on the type or amount of income. Therefore, the term "need standard" is not used in the table unless the state explicitly uses it to refer to its eligibility standard.

Some details concerning eligibility standards are not included in the table. In some states, different dollar amounts are used in different regions of the state; in those cases, the table includes the amounts applied to the majority of the state's caseload. In other states, the amounts may be higher for families with certain types of "special needs," such as a pregnancy; the amounts in the table assume no special needs. Also, a few states vary standards for one-parent versus two-parent families; the table includes values for a one-parent family with two children. And some states prorate the eligibility and/or benefit standards depending on whether a unit pays for shelter; the amounts in the table assume the unit pays all shelter costs.

Related tables: These standards by themselves are not necessarily comparable across states, since the income tests might be quite different. To determine how the standards are used in practice, see tables I.D.1, I.D.2, I.E.1, and IV.A.4.

Maximum income for initial eligibility for a family of three: Table I.E.4 synthesizes the various financial rules related to initial eligibility in order to provide information on the maximum amount of income a family of three can earn and still be eligible for assistance. The calculation incorporates information on the income eligibility rules for applicants, earned income disregards for eligibility and benefit computation, benefit computation policies, and the eligibility and payment standards. The calculation determines the maximum amount of earnings an applicant can have and still be "technically" eligible for assistance in each state. Technical eligibility does not mean that the unit will necessarily receive a cash benefit, but it will have passed all eligibility tests and will be eligible for some positive amount. Most states only distribute a cash benefit if it is over $10.

The calculation assumes the assistance unit includes one parent and two children, has only earned income, has no child care expenses, contains no children subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for all shelter costs with no subsidies, and is subject to the benefit standard that applies to the majority of the state's caseload.

Related tables: Table L3 provides the maximum income for initial eligibility from 1996 through 2003. Table IV.A.5 provides information on the amount of earnings a recipient may receive and remain eligible for assistance.

*Data not obtained.

[1] The Maximum Diversion Payment is either a flat payment, regardless of the family's size and the state's maximum benefit (represented in the table by a dollar amount), or a multiple of the maximum benefit the family would have received if it were receiving monthly TANF benefits (represented in the table by a number of months of benefits the family could receive). Note that if the state provides diversion payments based on a multiple of the maximum benefit, the amount will vary by the family size and the generosity of the state's maximum benefits.

[2] The entire payment is prorated over three months and counted as income if the unit applies for benefits within three months of receiving a payment.

[3] All child support payments received on behalf of the children in the unit are passed through to the diversion program participants during the three-month diversion period.

[4] If the unit applies for benefits during the three-month ineligibility period, the unit must repay the diversion payment. The payment will be prorated over a three-month period and the amount of the repayment will be deducted from the unit's monthly assistance payment.

[5] The diversion payment is considered a loan; therefore the recipient must pay back any amount borrowed. Any amount paid back will not count toward the time limit; however, if all or a portion of the amount has not been repaid, the months will count.

[6] Counties have the option to vary their diversion programs. These policies refer to Los Angeles County.

[7] The standard maximum diversion cash payment amount is the greater of three months or $2,000; however, for cases of "compelling need" the greater of six months or $4,000 is granted.

[8] Diversion services may be made in the form of cash, vendor, or noncash services. Diversion has been used to provide payments and services for child and dependent care, clothing, housing deposit, medical expenses, work supports pending receipt of employment income, tools or other items for employment, transportation, payments for automobile repairs, and payment of utility bills.

[9] If the unit applies for monthly TANF benefits after the diversion period (diversion amount divided by monthly benefit) ends, the state counts one month toward the time limit. If the unit applies during the diversion period, it can choose to count the diversion payment toward the time limit, or repay the diversion amount at a rate of 10 percent of the monthly benefit each month until the diversion is repaid. The number of months counted toward the 60-month time limit is calculated by dividing the total diversion payment by the maximum aid payment (MAP) for the apparently eligible AU at the time the diversion payment was made. The month(s) resulting from the calculation less any partial month, is (are) counted toward the 60-month time limit.

[10] Counties have the option to vary their diversion programs. These policies refer to Denver County.

[11] If assistance greater than $1,000 is requested, it must be approved by a designated staffing team. If an individual is seeking employment and training services through the mayor's Office of Workforce Development, there will be no limit to the amount of money issued.

[12] If an individual is seeking employment and training services through the mayor's Office of Workforce Development, there will be no limit to the number of diversion applications approved.

[13] If the payment is intended to cover greater than 120 days worth of need, the additional time counts toward the time limit. If an individual is seeking employment and training services through the mayor's Office of Workforce Development, there will be no time frame for how long services can be provided.

[14] The state's diversion program is related to retaining or obtaining employment and is only for parents living with natural or adopted children.

[15] The period of ineligibility depends on the amount of the diversion payment. Units receiving $1–500.99 are ineligible for one month, units receiving $501–1,000.99 are ineligible for two months, and units receiving $1,001–$1,500 are ineligible for three months.
[16] Florida has three separate diversion programs. An assistance unit may receive a one-time payment of up to $1,000 in Up-Front Diversion or Relocation Assistance, up to the amount needed to relocate, or a one-time $1,000 payment of Cash Severance Diversion. The unit is ineligible to receive assistance for three months after receiving Up-Front Diversion and for six months after receiving Relocation Assistance or Cash Severance Diversion. Up-Front Assistance is for individuals in need of assistance due to unexpected circumstances or emergency situations. Relocation Assistance is available for individuals who reside in an area with limited employment opportunities and experience one of the following: geographic isolation, formidable transportation barriers, isolation from extended family, or domestic violence that threatens the ability of a parent to maintain self-sufficiency. Cash Severance Diversion is available to TANF recipients if they meet the following criteria: are employed and receiving earnings; are able to verify their earnings; will remain employed for at least six months; have received cash assistance for at least six consecutive months since October 1996; and are eligible for at least one more month of TANF. Up-Front Diversion and Relocation Assistance do not count toward time limits. Cash Severance Diversion does not count toward time limits if the payment is made in a month in which the unit also receives a TANF payment. If the payment is made in a month in which the unit does not receive a TANF payment, the Cash Severance Diversion payment counts as a month toward the time limit.
[17] The period of ineligibility depends on the amount of the diversion payment. Units receiving a payment equaling three months of benefits are ineligible for five consecutive months, units receiving a payment equaling six months of benefits are ineligible for nine consecutive months, and units receiving a payment equaling eight months of benefits are ineligible for twelve consecutive months.
[18] Iowa is conducting a demonstration project that provides diversion assistance to its clients.
[19] The unit cannot receive a diversion payment more than once in a 24-month period.
[20] Although it still exists in the law, Louisiana's diversion program has not received funding since September 2002.
[21] Diversion payments are only provided to caretaker relatives or parents who are employed or looking for work.
[22] Units that apply for benefits during the three-month ineligibility period must repay any diversion payment received for any period that was covered by both diversion and TANF.
[23] On July 1, 2003, the statewide Diversionary Assistance Program was repealed, along with several other statewide programs. These programs were replaced with a block grant given to the counties called the Consolidated Fund. Counties will still be able to fund Diversion Assistance from the Consolidated Fund, but will not be required to.
[24] Applicants for WFNJ/TANF must participate in New Jersey's diversion program, Early Employment Initiative, if they (1) have a work history that equals or exceeds four months of full-time employment in the last 12 months, (2) have at least one child, (3) appear to meet TANF eligibility requirements, (4) are not in immediate need, and (5) do not meet criteria for a deferral from work requirements. Participants receive a one-time, lump-sum payment and are required to pursue an intensive job search for 15 to 30 days while their WFNJ/TANF application is processed. If participants obtain employment and withdraw their application, they are eligible to receive a second lump-sum payment to assist in the transition to employment. If no employment is secured, the applicant is referred back to the WFNJ/TANF agency for cash assistance.
[25] The maximum amount a family would receive is relative to the number of persons in the unit. The amount included in the table is for a unit of eight or more people. The maximum diversion payment for a family of three is $750. If the agency feels an individual may benefit, he or she may be considered suitable for repeated participation in EEI when determining subsequent eligibility for the program.
[26] If a participant is unable to find a job through the diversion program or loses employment, and reapplies for TANF benefits within 60 days of the original application, TANF benefits will be retroactive to the date of application. Any lump-sum payment received under the EEI is prorated from the date of the original application to the date of the reactivation and subtracted from the monthly grant amount for which the assistance unit is eligible. If this lump sum exceeds the family's monthly grant amount, the excess is counted as unearned income when calculating the monthly assistance benefits for any subsequent month. If the applicant loses his or her employment after 60 days from the application date, the family will need to reapply for TANF.
[27] The diversion payment is only available to assist applicants in keeping a job or accepting a bona fide offer of employment.
[28] Units may apply for assistance during the 12-month period, but the benefits will be prorated to account for the diversion payment. Units receiving a diversion payment in another state may not receive a diversion payment or monthly benefits in New Mexico for 12 months or the length of the period of ineligibility in the other state, whichever is shorter.
[29] New York has three types of diversion payments: Diversion Payments (for crisis needs such as moving expenses, storage fees, or household structural or equipment repairs), Diversion Transportation Payments (for employment-related transportation expenses), and Diversion Rental Payments (for rental housing).
[30] The type and amount of the payment is determined on a case-by-case basis and is dependent upon the needs of the applicant.
[31] Counties have the option to vary their diversion programs. These policies refer to Cuyahoga County.
[32] The unit may receive up to the maximum amount over a 12-month period. The maximum is $400 for contingent need that threatens the unit's safety or health and $700 to prevent the unit from entering TANF or to help the unit retain employment. The combined total maximum cannot exceed $1,000.
[33] Individuals must be employed or have a bona fide offer of employment to qualify for diversion assistance.
[34] South Dakota has no formal limit on the number of payments a unit may receive; however, a state source reports that it is unlikely that an assistance unit would receive a diversion payment more than once every 12 months.
[35] To qualify for the state's diversion program, the assistance unit must meet one of the "Crisis Criteria": (1) the caretaker or second parent loss of employment in the process month, application month, or two months before application; (2) a single parent must have experienced a loss of financial support from a spouse within the past 12 months due to death, divorce, separation, or abandonment AND have been employed within 12 months of the application or process month; (3) the caretaker or second parent has graduated from a university, college, junior college, or technical training school within 12 months of the application or process month AND is underemployed or unemployed; or (4) the caretaker and/or second parent is employed but faces the loss or potential loss of transportation and/or shelter OR faces a medical emergency temporarily preventing them from continuing to work.
[36] The first diversion payment in a 12-month period will not count as a month of financial assistance against the 36-month time limit; the second and subsequent diversion payments in a 12-month period will count.
[37] If the unit applies for benefits during the 12-month ineligibility period, the diversion payment becomes a loan. The amount of the loan is calculated by dividing the diversion payment by 12 and multiplying the quotient by the number of months remaining of the 12-month period since the diversion payment was received. The unit's monthly benefit is decreased by 5 percent each month until the loan is repaid.
[38] Recipients may also be eligible for a one-time relocation payment of $1,500.
[39] For units that received diversion assistance before July 2000, three months are counted toward the lifetime limit.

[40] The diversion payment is considered a loan to assist with expenses related to obtaining or maintaining employment and it must be repaid. Repayments are expected within 12 months but may be extended to 24 months. The loan may be paid back in cash or through a combination of cash and volunteer community service (valued at the higher of the state or federal minimum wage).

[41] The caseworker may issue loans for between $25 and $1,600. In a 12-month period, a unit may not receive more than $1,600 in loans or have an outstanding loan balance of more than $1,600.

Note: Many states requiring job search at application exempt certain individuals from the requirement. See the WRD for more information on these exemptions.

[1] If transportation and/or child care are not available at application, the job search requirement will be delayed until after the TEA application is approved and supportive services can be provided.
[2] Both parents in two-parent households are required to participate in job search while their application for assistance is pending. However, if child care is necessary, one parent can participate in a search to find child care.
[3] Job search is a mandatory part of the state's diversion program. Applicants will automatically be placed in the Early Employment Initiative (diversion) program if they (1) have a work history that equals or exceeds four months of full-time employment in the past 12 months, (2) have at least one child, (3) appear to meet TANF eligibility requirements, (4) are not in immediate need, and (5) do not meet criteria for a deferral from work requirements. Once in the program, participants will receive an activity payment and will be required to search for a job during the TANF application process. If they are not successful in securing employment, they will be eligible for TANF benefits.
[4] Job search is not an eligibility requirement but many applicants will be assigned to job search and will receive a labor market test (a labor market test consists of a structured and assisted job search designed to assess the applicant's employability).

[1] A pregnant teen that has not graduated from high school is eligible from the date the pregnancy is verified.
[2] A pregnant woman must meet the eligibility requirements as if her child were already born and living with her.
[3] A pregnant woman's financial eligibility in the month that her child is due is determined by comparing her gross income to the standard of need for one person. If she lives with the father of her unborn child, financial eligibility is determined by comparing the sum of the pregnant woman's income and the father's income to the standard of need for three people (the number of people who would be included in the family unit when the child is born). If income exceeds the standard, the application is denied. If income is less than the standard, only the mother's income is considered in determining the amount of the grant.
[4] A pregnant woman is eligible on the first day of the month in which her child is expected.
[5] A pregnant woman is eligible in the ninth month, unless her doctor verifies that she is unable to work; then she is eligible in the seventh month.
[6] A pregnant woman is eligible only if she is in her last trimester and is unable to work for medical reasons.
[7] A pregnant woman and her spouse, if living with her, are eligible for assistance.
[8] A pregnant woman, her unborn child, and the father of the unborn child are eligible for assistance.
[9] A pregnant woman is eligible for assistance only if the child would be eligible for assistance if born. The father of the unborn child or the spouse of the pregnant woman, if living with her, is also eligible.
[10] A pregnant woman and her unborn child are eligible for assistance.
[11] A pregnant woman and her spouse are eligible for assistance.
[12] The needs, income, and resources of the otherwise eligible father of the unborn child(ren) are considered in determining eligibility and payment if the father lives in the home.
[13] A pregnant woman and the father of the child are eligible for assistance.
[14] A pregnant woman who is at risk of or has a safety concern due to domestic violence may be eligible for benefits earlier.
[15] A pregnant woman is eligible for assistance if her child would be eligible for assistance if born.
[16] A pregnant woman can begin to receive assistance within three months of her medically verified due date.
[17] A pregnant woman may be eligible in the seventh month if she is a minor or is documented as having a high-risk pregnancy.
[18] A pregnant woman may only receive benefits once a licensed medical practitioner has verified the pregnancy and expected date of delivery.
[19] A pregnant woman is not eligible for benefits but can obtain employment training, job search assistance, and case management services. After the child is born, the mother and child may receive the Community Service Jobs level of benefits for the first 12 weeks.

Note: In some states, benefits are provided to two-parent units under a state-funded program instead of through federal TANF. This table includes the treatment of two-parent units regardless of the funding source.

[1] Eligibility rules for two-parent, nondisabled families are special categorical rules in addition to the other state rules that all units must pass. Under the AFDC program, states imposed rules on two-parent families' work effort, including limits on hours of work, work history tests, and waiting periods. Some states have continued to impose these policies under TANF.

[2] Applicants have to demonstrate previous attachment to the workforce; under AFDC, applicants were required to work at least six of the last 13 quarters. The 13-quarter period must have ended within one year of applying for assistance. Generally, work history could also be established if one of the following applied: (1) the applicant received unemployment compensation (UC) benefits within 12 months of the date of application or (2) the applicant would have been eligible for UC benefits within the previous 12 months but did not apply or his or her employment was not covered by UC laws.

[3] To be eligible for cash assistance, the individual has to have been employed less than 100 hours during the four-week period before the date of application.

[4] Applicants must be connected to the workforce, which includes one of the following: (1) currently working at least 20 hours a week, (2) receiving Unemployment Compensation, (3) unemployed or working less than 20 hours a week and has earned $500 within the six months before application, (4) receiving retirement benefits, or (5) has received disability benefits based on 100 percent disability in any of the last six months.

[5] Applicants must have earned at least $1,000 during the 24-month period before the month of application.

[6] North Dakota does not provide benefits to two-parent, nondisabled units.

[7] The parents in the unit must have a combined gross income in the past six months of at least $1,500 and must not have voluntarily terminated employment, reduced hours worked, or refused a job offer within the previous six months (without good cause).

[1] This variable indicates whether the state requires minor parents to live with their parent(s) or in another state-approved setting. If "Yes" is coded, a minor is not eligible to receive assistance unless living with a parent or in an approved setting.
[2] Minor parents having a marital status of married, separated, divorced, or widowed are not subject to the residency requirement.
[3] Children born after December 31, 1998, to teenage parents are ineligible for cash assistance unless the parent is married or at least 18 years old. Noncash assistance services in the form of vouchers may be provided upon request but will not be automatically given each month. Assistance is paid through a protective payee to the minor parent's parent or the adult in the supervised living arrangement.
[4] Minor parents under 18 years old are not subject to the requirement if they are married.
[5] Minor, unmarried parents can head a unit if they are not living with a parent, legal guardian, qualified relative, or in a maternity home.
[6] A minor parent can head his or her own unit if he or she has been emancipated by court action or marriage.
[7] To receive assistance, the minor parent must be at least 16 years old.

Note: The table only describes units in which the stepparent has no child in common with the spouse (head of unit) or any dependents of his or her own living in the unit, the spouse is living in the home, and the spouse is not incapacitated.

* Data not obtained.
[1] The stepparent may be included in the assistance unit if the natural parent is living in the home but is excluded from the unit (for example, if the natural parent is an SSI recipient).
[2] The stepparent is a mandatory participant in the unit unless the stepparent's income causes the assistance unit to become ineligible, in which case the stepparent is not required to be included in the unit. If the stepparent chooses not to receive assistance, the unit becomes a child-only unit (the spouse is also excluded from the unit) and his or her income is used to determine eligibility but not the benefit amount. For more information regarding deeming, see table I.D.2.
[3] An Indian stepparent in Indian country who is under exclusive jurisdiction of a tribe for the purposes of determining the domestic relations rights of the family has the option of being included in the assistance unit.
[4] The stepparent may be included (but is not required to be included) in the assistance group when the natural or adoptive parent is incapacitated or when the natural or adoptive parent marries while receiving benefits.
[5] The stepparent is included in the W-2 group for income purposes but cannot be the mandatory work program participant.

Note: This table refers only to the largest groups of qualified aliens that entered the United States before August 22, 1996. It does not address a few of the smaller groups of qualified aliens, including Cuban/Haitian entrants or aliens granted conditional entry before April 1, 1980.

* Data not obtained.
[1] This table only identifies the eligibility for federally funded TANF assistance of certain groups of qualified aliens that entered the country before August 22, 1996. It does not provide information on the eligibility of other nonqualified aliens who may be eligible for state-funded assistance. Aliens are categorized by their current immigrant status (rather than their initial status upon entry into the United States, if different).
[2] Lawful permanent residents are defined as individuals who have been admitted into the United States permanently.
[3] Asylees and refugees are immigrants who flee their countries owing to persecution because of race, religion, nationality, political opinion, or membership in a social group. Refugees request permission to enter the country, while asylees are already in the United States and request permission to stay.
[4] Deportees are individuals granted a stay of deportation or who have had their deportation withheld.
[5] Parolees are individuals permitted entry into the United States in cases of emergency or because of an overriding public interest. The table only discusses the eligibility of aliens paroled into the United States for at least one year. Aliens paroled into the United States for less than a year are not "qualified" aliens according to the immigrant definition in PRWORA.
[6] Battered noncitizens refer to those individuals who meet the statutory definition of a battered alien pursuant to 8 USC 1641 (c).
[7] Some battered noncitizens that meet the qualified alien definition.
[8] Beginning February 1997, all immigrant units are funded through a state program with the same eligibility rules as the state's PONO/TANF program. No immigrant units are eligible for federal TANF funding, however.
[9] Qualified aliens with this status are only eligible for benefits for seven years beginning on the date they entered the United States.
[10] Battered noncitizens who are the spouse or minor unmarried dependent child of a U.S. citizen or legal permanent resident and do not live with the family member who battered them are eligible.
[11] Lawful permanent residents are not eligible for benefits for five years from the time they are granted legal status.
[12] A noncitizen that is a battered spouse or child of a veteran or a person on active duty in the U.S. armed forces is eligible.

Note: This table refers only to noncitizens who entered the United States on or after August 22, 1996, who are ineligible for federally funded TANF assistance because of the five-year bar or nonqualified status. Refugees/asylees and deportees are eligible for federal funding during this period and therefore are not in this table.

[1] Qualified aliens are defined under PRWORA as lawful permanent residents (includes Amerasians), refugees, asylees, individuals who have had their deportation withheld, parolees admitted for one or more years, certain battered aliens, Cuban/Haitian entrants, and aliens granted conditional entry before April 1, 1980.
[2] Lawful permanent residents are defined as individuals who have been admitted into the United States permanently.
[3] Parolees are individuals permitted entry into the United States in cases of emergency or because of an overriding public interest. The table only discusses the eligibility of aliens paroled into the United States for at least one year. Aliens paroled into the United States for less than a year are not "qualified" aliens according to the immigrant definition in PRWORA.
[4] Battered noncitizens refer to those individuals who meet the statutory definition of a battered alien pursuant to 8 USC 1641 (c).
[5] The groups of noncitizens listed here are not qualified aliens as defined by federal law; therefore, these groups would never be eligible for most federally funded TANF benefits.
[6] American Indians born in Canada.
[7] All nonqualified aliens that are not one of the following: (1) nonimmigrant aliens lawfully admitted for a temporary purpose or temporary residence, or (2) undocumented aliens.
[8] Noncitizens with mental retardation.
[9] Individuals with Temporary Protective Status and some legal immigrants age 18-70 who have been in the state for four years and are participating in literacy or citizenship classes.
[10] Individuals permanently residing in the United States under color of law (PRUCOL) as defined by the state.
[11] Nonqualified noncitizens that meet all other eligibility requirements, were lawfully residing in the United States before August 22, 1996, and were residing in the state before July 1, 1997.
[12] All nonqualified noncitizens that are legally in the country are eligible for assistance.

Note: This table refers only to the largest groups of qualified aliens who entered the United States on or after August 22, 1996. This table does not address a few of the smaller groups of qualified aliens, including Cuban/Haitian entrants or aliens granted conditional entry before April 1, 1980.

* Data not obtained.
[1] This table only identifies the eligibility for federally funded TANF assistance of certain groups of qualified aliens after the expiration of the five-year bar. It does not provide information on the eligibility of other nonqualified aliens who may be eligible for state-funded assistance. Aliens are categorized by their current immigrant status (rather than their initial status upon entry into the United States, if different).
[2] Lawful permanent residents are defined as individuals who have been admitted into the United States permanently.
[3] Asylees and refugees are immigrants who flee their countries owing to persecution because of race, religion, nationality, political opinion, or membership in a social group. Refugees request permission to enter the country, while asylees are already in the United States and request permission to stay.
[4] Deportees are individuals granted a stay of deportation or who have had their deportation withheld.
[5] Parolees are individuals permitted entry into the United States in cases of emergency or because of an overriding public interest. The table only discusses the eligibility of aliens paroled into the United States for at least one year. Aliens paroled into the United States for less than a year are not “qualified” aliens according to the immigrant definition in PRWORA.
[6] Battered noncitizens refer to those individuals who meet the statutory definition of a battered alien pursuant to 8 USC 1641 (c).
[7] Some battered immigrants who meet the qualified alien definition.
[8] Aliens with this immigrant status are only potentially eligible for assistance during their first seven years in the country following entry.
[9] Beginning February 1997 all immigrant units are funded through a state program with the same eligibility rules as the state’s PONO/TANF program. No immigrant units are eligible for federal TANF funding, however.
[10] Qualified aliens with this status are only eligible for benefits for seven years beginning on the date they entered the United States.
[11] Battered noncitizens who are the spouse or minor unmarried dependent child of a U.S. citizen or legal permanent resident and do not live with the family member who battered them are eligible.

[E] Equity value of the vehicle.
[F] Fair market value of the vehicle.

[1] Units including an elderly person may exempt $3,000; all other units exempt $2,000.
[2] Vehicles used as a home, to produce self-employment income, to transport a disabled family member, or to participate in an approved work activity are also exempt.
[3] Recreational vehicles are not exempt.
[4] One vehicle per household is exempt if equipped for a handicapped person, used to obtain medical treatment, or used for employment.
[5] The unit may exempt $9,500 of the equity value of a vehicle or the entire value of one vehicle used to transport a handicapped person.
[6] If the vehicle is used to look for work, travel to work, or education and training the unit may exclude $4,650 of the value. If the vehicle is not used for these purposes, $1,500 of the equity value will be excluded. If the vehicle is used more than 50 percent of the time to produce income or as a dwelling, it is totally excluded.
[7] The value of one specially equipped vehicle used to transport a disabled family member is exempt. Also, all vehicles with a fair market value under $1,500 are exempt.
[8] The asset limit is based on unit size: one person receives $2,000, two people receive $3,000, and three or more people receive another $50 for every additional person.
[9] When the unit owns more than one vehicle, the one of greater value is exempted.
[10] Only liquid resources are considered for eligibility determinations. Liquid resources include cash, checking and savings accounts, CDs, stocks and bonds, and money market accounts.
[11] The state compares the value of the vehicle to two standards: $10,000 of the fair market value and $5,000 of the equity value. If the value of the vehicle exceeds either limit, the excess counts toward the asset limit; however, if the value of the vehicle exceeds both limits, only the excess of the greater amount counts toward the asset limit.
[12] Recreational vehicles (unless used as a home), all terrain vehicles (ATVs), and other off-road vehicles are not exempt. Additionally, industrial vehicles (i.e., heavy haulers, pulpwood trucks, etc.) are exempt as long as they are used for income-producing purposes over 50 percent of the time or as long as they annually produce income consistent with their fair market value. Determination of whether to count a vehicle is made on a case-by-case basis.
[13] $1,500 of the equity value of the unit's second vehicle is exempt.
[14] All income-producing vehicles are also exempt.
[15] The asset limit is based on unit size: one person receives $4,000, two or more people receive $6,000.
[16] The entire vehicle is exempt only if used for employment, training, or medical transportation; any motor vehicle used as a home is also exempt.
[17] Units with two adults may exempt up to $4,650 of the fair market value of a second vehicle if it is essential for work, training, or transportation of a handicapped individual.
[18] The total limit is $3,500; however, only $1,500 of that amount can be in liquid resources and only $2,000 can be in nonliquid resources. Liquid resources include the (convertible) cash value of life insurance policies, cash, stocks, bonds, negotiable notes, purchase contracts, and other similar assets. Nonliquid resources include a second vehicle, equipment, tools, livestock (with the exception of nonsalable domestic pets), one-time sale asset conversion, and lump-sum payments.
[19] The entire vehicle is exempt only if used for transportation to work, work activities, or daily living requirements.
[20] If the vehicle is needed to seek or retain employment, $9,300 of the vehicle is exempt.
[21] The asset limit is based on unit size: one person receives $3,000, two people receive $6,000, and another $25 is allowed for each additional person thereafter.
[22] Ohio has eliminated the asset test.
[23] There is more than one phase of the application process in Oregon. The asset limit for applicants first applying for TANF is $2,500. If the applicant makes it through the first stage of application, he or she must participate in the Assessment Program in which he or she is assessed and given a case plan to follow. If the applicant does not follow the case plan, he or she maintains the $2,500 assets limit as long as he or she is in the Assessment Program. If the applicant complies with the case plan, he or she is allowed a $10,000 asset limit.
[24] A unit may exempt $4,650 of the fair market value of a vehicle. After this exemption, if the remaining amount of the value of the vehicle disqualifies the unit from assistance, $1,500 of the equity value of the vehicle is exempted. The entire value of a vehicle to provide necessary transportation of a disabled family member may be exempted.
[25] Vehicles owned by or used to transport disabled individuals, essential to self-employment, income-producing vehicles, and vehicles used as a home are also exempt.
[26] In addition to one primary vehicle, an assistance unit may totally exclude a vehicle used to transport water or fuel to the home when it is not piped in, a vehicle used to transport a disabled member or SSI recipient in household, or a vehicle used in producing income or as a home; an assistance unit may also exclude $4,650 of the fair market value of a vehicle used to transport members of the unit for education or employment.
[27] $4,650 is exempt for each vehicle owned by a TANF-certified or disqualified household member and $15,000 is exempt for one vehicle owned by a two-parent family. All licensed vehicles used for income-producing purposes are exempt. Leased vehicles are exempt as long as the title is in the leasing company's name.
[28] The entire equity value of a vehicle used to transport a disabled household member is also exempt.
[29] When the applicant owns a second vehicle, $1,500 of the equity value or $7,500 of the fair market value is disregarded.
[30] The $12,000 exemption applies to one vehicle for a single-parent unit and to two vehicles for a married couple.

Notes: "Family size" represents the grandparent and all dependents outside the assistance unit. In general, states also deduct child support payments, alimony, and payments made to dependents outside the household from the grandparent's income before deeming to the unit. See table I.E.3 for information on the value of the standards for a family of three.

The table describes the treatment of grandparent's income for applicant units. If different policies are used for recipient units, it is footnoted.

* Data not obtained.

[+] There is no deeming because the grandparent must be included in the unit for the minor to receive benefits. Therefore, all of the grandparent's income is included for eligibility purposes.

[1] In this table the term "grandparent" refers to the parent of a minor parent. This table describes whether a portion of the grandparent's (a parent of a minor parent's) income is deemed available to the minor and her child when the grandparent is not part of the assistance unit but living in the household with the minor. The table describes the disregards that the grandparent and his or her dependents are allowed to claim for their own needs. The remaining income after these disregards are deducted from the grandparent's income is the amount available, or "deemed," to the minor parent and her children.

[2] The grandparent's remaining income after deductions is divided by the total number of dependents who do not receive assistance plus the grandparent and her child applying for assistance (the minor child's child is not included in this calculation). This amount is deemed and the remainder is allocated to the grandparent.

[3] Recipient units may disregard $225 and 50 percent of the remainder.

[4] Children born after December 31, 1998, to minors are ineligible for cash assistance. The minor may still be eligible for assistance as part of her parent's assistance unit. In these cases, there is no deeming. For minors with children born before December 31, 1998, their parents must apply on behalf of the minor parent and the minor parent's child. If the grandparent does not want to be included in the unit, the state does not include the grandparent's needs for eligibility or benefit computation; however, a deemed portion of their income (as specified above) is counted for eligibility and benefit computation. The grandparent must also act as the head of the unit and receive the payments for his or her child and grandchild.

[5] Recipient units may disregard 200 percent of the federal poverty level for the grandparents and dependents outside the unit.

[6] Income is deemed to a minor parent unit even if he or she is not living in the home with the grandparent. The rules for deeming are the same.

Notes: "Family size" represents the stepparent and all dependents outside the assistance unit. In general, states also deduct child support payments, alimony, and payments made to dependents outside the household from the stepparent's income before deeming to the unit. See table I.E.3 for information on the value of the standards for a family of three.

These policies apply to units in which the stepparent is not a part of the assistance unit but is living in the household.

Unless otherwise noted, the stepparent's income is deemed to the spouse and the spouse's dependents.

[+] There is no deeming because the stepparent must be included in the unit. Therefore, all of the stepparent's income is included for eligibility purposes.
[1] The stepparent's income is deemed only to the stepchild(ren) in the unit.
[2] If the stepparent is not included in the unit, all of his or her countable income is counted for eligibility and benefit computation; however, his or her needs are not included.
[3] Deduct all child support payments and payments made to dependents outside the household before applying the 50 percent disregard.
[4] The stepparent's countable income is tested against 50 percent of the federal poverty level for a household size that includes the stepparent, the members of the assistance unit, and any other dependents not in the unit. When the income is below 50 percent of the federal poverty level, no income is deemed to the unit. When the income is over 50 percent of the federal poverty level, all of the stepparent's income minus deductions is deemed to the unit.
[5] Deduct all child support, alimony, and child care paid to someone outside the household up to a maximum of $200 per child if employed full-time and up to $100 per child if employed part-time (full-time is defined as 100 hours or more a month) before applying this disregard.
[6] The stepparent is not required to be a member of the unit if his or her income makes the unit ineligible for benefits. If the stepparent chooses not to receive assistance, the unit becomes a child-only unit and the stepparent's income is treated as follows: (1) For determining the eligibility of the unit, the income of all household members, including the natural parent, his or her children, the stepparent, and any children the stepparent can claim as dependents, is used to determine the children's eligibility for assistance. If total household income is below 150 percent of the federal poverty level, the assistance unit is eligible for benefits. (2) For determining the benefits, all the income of the stepparent is excluded. However, the natural parent's earned income is reduced by the 50 percent earnings disregard and by the payment benefit level for a unit of one. All remaining income of the natural parent is used in determining the benefits for the children.
[7] For the first six months of a new marriage, all stepparent income is disregarded, provided the parent was previously receiving benefits. If the stepparent has a child in common with the parent, the needs of the stepparent are included for benefit calculation.
[8] An Indian stepparent in Indian country who is under exclusive jurisdiction of a tribe for the purposes of determining the domestic relations rights of the family has the option of being included in the assistance unit.
[9] The stepparent's income is deemed only to the spouse.

Notes: Only earned income disregards are described in the table. Child care disregards and other special disregards, such as deductions for units subject to a time limit or a family cap, are not included.

"No explicit net income test" indicates that either the state imposes no net income test at application or imposes a net income test, but the calculation of the test and disregards allowed for the test are no different from those used to calculate the benefit.

"No disregards allowed" indicates that the state does test for initial eligibility but does not allow units to disregard any income.

The table describes the disregards used for both applicant and recipient eligibility purposes; however, if different policies are applied to applicants and recipients, the policies in the table apply to applicants and the recipients' policies are footnoted.

[1] Recipients may disregard $150 and 33 percent of remainder in first 12 months, $150 and 25 percent of remainder in months 13–24, $150 and 20 percent of remainder in months 25–36, $150 and 15 percent of remainder in months 37–48, $150, 10 percent of remainder in months 49–60, and $150 thereafter. Recipients include any units who have received assistance in one of the previous four months.
[2] Recipients may disregard 20 percent and 60 percent of the remainder.
[3] Applicant units receiving assistance in one of the last four months may disregard $200 and 50 percent.
[4] Recipients may disregard $120 and 33.3 percent of remainder for first four months, $120 next eight months, and $90 thereafter.
[5] Two-parent units may disregard $120 and 33.3 percent.
[6] Two-parent units may disregard all earnings in excess of 35 hours a week for one parent and 24 hours a week for the other parent and $225 and 50 percent in the first 24 months. Thereafter, they may disregard $225 and 50 percent of the remainder. The disregard for earnings in excess of the participation requirement only applies to recipients for the first 24 months of benefit receipt, for both single- and two-parent units.
[7] Recipients may disregard $120 and 90 percent of remainder (up to $1,400) for four out of 12 months. The four months need not be consecutive. Once the recipient has received four months of the 90 percent disregard, he or she is not eligible to receive the disregard again until the TANF case has been denied and remains denied for one full month, and 12 calendar months have passed since the denial. The 12-month ineligibility period begins with the first full month of denial after the client used the fourth month of the 90 percent disregard. In all other months, recipients may disregard $120.
[8] Recipients may disregard $100 and 50 percent of remainder. However, to be eligible for the 50 percent disregard the unit must have received benefits in at least one of the previous four months.

Notes: The amounts in this table represent all standards used during the eligibility process, including those used for grandparent deeming, stepparent deeming, applicant income eligibility tests, and recipient income eligibility tests. See tables I.D.1, I.D.2, I.E.1, and IV.A.4 for more information on how these standards are used. Note this table provides information on the standards only; to determine how the standards are applied, see the companion tables listed above.

The amounts in the table are based on the following assumptions about the assistance unit: there is one adult and two children; the children are not subject to a family cap; and the unit has no special needs, pays for shelter, and lives in the most populated area of the state.

Notes: Initial eligibility is calculated assuming that the unit is employed at application, has only earned income, has no child care expenses, contains one adult and no children subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for shelter, and lives in the most populated area of the state.

[1] The amounts in this table represent the maximum amount of earnings an applicant can have and still be "technically" eligible for assistance in each state. Technical eligibility does not mean that the unit will necessarily receive a cash benefit, but it will have passed all eligibility tests and is eligible for some positive amount. The amounts have been rounded to the nearest dollar, so in some cases the family may be able to earn slightly less than the amount in the table and in other cases it may be able to earn slightly more. Most states only distribute a cash benefit if it is over $10.
[2] Applies to units that have received assistance for no more than two months in a lifetime. For units applying for their third and subsequent months of benefits, the eligibility threshold for a family of three is $1,363.
[3] For purposes of the state's earned income disregard, the adult head is assumed to be working 40 hours a week.
[4] Units with full-time employment (generally greater than 30 hours a week) will not receive a cash benefit in the state. There are provisions to provide prorated benefits to Community Service Jobs participants who are also employed part-time at an unsubsidized job. These eligibility determinations are made on a case-by-case basis. Recipients may earn up to $1,462 and still be eligible for nonfinancial assistance, however.

Benefits

II. Benefits

The tables in this chapter of the Databook describe key aspects of the rules for calculating the assistance unit's benefit as of July 2003.

A. If a family passes all eligibility tests, what is received?

If a family passes all eligibility tests, both nonfinancial and financial, a benefit is computed. Although states use many different formulas to determine benefits, there are general rules that most states apply. All but two states allow recipients to disregard a portion of their earned income before benefit computation and then use the unit's total net income to calculate the benefit.[14] In the more straightforward calculations, net income is subtracted from a state-determined standard (often called the payment standard), which varies by family size, and the benefit paid is the difference—sometimes referred to as the income deficit. Some states have, however, developed more complex calculations. For instance, some states impose a statutory maximum benefit. In these states, the benefit is either the income deficit or the statutory maximum, whichever is less. Still other states multiply the income deficit by a percentage, which is sometimes referred to as the benefit reduction rate. This percentage of the income deficit is the benefit provided to the unit. Some states combine both a statutory maximum and benefit reduction rate into their calculation. The following section describes these policies in greater detail.

Earned income disregards for benefit computation: Table II.A.1 describes the earned income disregards allowed in determining net income for benefit computation. If a state does not apply any earned income disregards to compute net income for benefit computation (so all of a family's earnings are included as income for benefit computation), "No disregards allowed" appears in the table.

[14] Two states—Arkansas and Wisconsin—do not vary their benefits by net income or allow disregards. Instead, they provide a flat benefit to the assistance unit. This means the unit receives a set amount every month no matter what their countable income is (as long as the income does not exceed the state's income eligibility thresholds).

Some states disregard a portion of the child care expenses paid by a family and/or allow special disregards for units subject to a family cap or time limit. Those disregards are not included in the table but are captured in the WRD.

In rare cases, states use different earned income disregards to determine the benefit of a unit in its first month of eligibility versus subsequent months. If that is the case, the body of the table describes the rules for the subsequent months of eligibility, and the rules for the first month are footnoted.

Related tables: Disregards for benefit computation and income eligibility may differ. For information on the earned income disregards used for income eligibility, see table I.E.2. Table L4, in the last section of this book, describes the earned income disregards used for benefit computation from 1996 through 2003.

Benefit determination policies: Table II.A.2 describes how states compute benefits for units that pass all applicable eligibility tests. In most cases, net income is subtracted from a payment standard, which typically varies by the size of the assistance unit. The table indicates the income standards used by states to determine the benefit. To determine the value of these standards for a family size of three, see table II.A.3.

Related tables: Table II.A.3 provides the benefit standard(s) used to compute benefits for a three-person family. To compute the net income used for benefit computation, table II.A.1 describes the earned income disregards allowed and tables I.D.1, I.D.2, and IV.A.2 include policies on treatment of unearned income (amounts deemed from grandparent units and stepparent units, and child support income). Table II.A.4 combines information from tables II.A.2 and II.A.3 and presents the benefit paid to a three-person assistance unit with no net income. Table L5, in the last section of this book, provides those maximum benefits for 1996 through 2003.

Benefit standards: As described earlier, most benefit computation procedures involve state-established income amounts that vary by the size of the assistance unit. The WRD includes the benefit standards used for each family size from 1 through 12. Table II.A.3 provides the standards for a three-person assistance unit only.

The table identifies the standard by the name used in the caseworker manual. Under the former AFDC program, the standards for benefit computation were the payment standard and, if the state included one, the maximum benefit. However, owing to the complexity of state programs, identifying the payment standard and maximum benefit is no longer clear. States may include multiple standards in the benefit calculation, depending on the type or amount of income. Therefore, the terms payment standard and maximum benefit are not used in the table unless the state explicitly uses them to refer to their benefit computation standards.

Some details concerning benefit standards are not included in the table. In some states, different dollar amounts are used in different regions of the state; in those cases, the table includes the amounts applied to the majority of the state's caseload. In other states, the amounts may be higher for families with certain "special needs," such as a pregnancy; the amounts in the table assume no special needs. Also, a few states vary standards for one-parent versus two-parent families; the table includes values for a one-parent family with two children. And some states prorate the eligibility and/or benefit standards depending on whether a unit pays for shelter; the amounts in the table assume the unit pays all shelter costs.

Related tables: These standards by themselves are not necessarily comparable across states, since the benefit computation procedures might be quite different. To determine how the standards are used in practice, see table II.A.2. Also, table II.A.4 provides the benefit paid to a three-person unit with no other income, and table L5 provides that information for 1996 through 2003.

Maximum monthly benefit for a family of three with no income: Table II.A.4 provides information on the maximum benefit in each state. The maximum benefit calculation combines the information on a state's benefit computation policies with the dollar amounts used for benefit computation to present the benefit paid to a three-person unit with no income. If a state computes benefits as a payment standard minus net income, then this figure will simply equal the payment standard. In other cases, this figure will equal a statutory maximum benefit that is less than the payment standard. In still other cases, it will be a percentage of the payment standard.

The calculation assumes the assistance unit includes one parent and two children, contains no children subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for all shelter costs with no subsidies, and is subject to the benefit standard that applies to the majority of the state's caseload.

Related tables: Table L5 provides the benefit paid to a three-person assistance unit with no net income for 1996 through 2003.

Notes: Only earned income disregards are described in the table. Child care disregards and other special disregards, such as deductions for units subject to time limits and family caps, are not included.

The table describes the earned income disregards used to compute a recipient's benefit. If different disregards are used to compute an applicant's first-month benefit, they are footnoted.

When no duration is specified for the disregards, they remain for the entire period of receipt.

[1] This disregard is also applied to applicants who have received assistance in one of the previous four months
[2] Recipients are eligible for the one-time 100 percent disregard if they become newly employed or report increased wages acquired after approval.
[3] The six months in which the extra $900 is disregarded need not be consecutive; however, the recipient may use this extra disregard in no more than six months over the course of his or her lifetime.
[4] Recipients are eligible for the one-time 100 percent disregard if they find employment of 35 hours a week within the first 30 days following initial approval for TANF. If work is not found within 30 days, the recipient is ineligible to ever receive the disregard again. An additional 100 percent disregard is available to units for three months when the unit's case is subject to closure due to increased earnings and the individual is employed for at least 25 hours a week at the federal minimum wage or higher. The recipient may not have already received the six-month disregard, unless there has been at least a 12-month break in receipt of TANF benefits. The three-month disregard may be received more than once during the 60-month TANF benefit period, provided that there is a period of at least 12 consecutive months in which a family does not receive TANF benefits before the family reapplies for assistance. Two-parent units may disregard 100 percent of earnings for the first six months, $120 and 33.3 percent of remainder in the next 12 months, and $90 thereafter.
[5] These disregards only apply to recipients who become employed while receiving TANF. Applicants and those recipients who gained employment before receiving TANF are allowed to disregard $120 and 33.3 percent of remainder for first four months, $120 next eight months, and $90 thereafter.
[6] The 100 percent disregard is only applicable once every 12 months, even if employment is lost and then regained. Also, applicants are not eligible for the 100 percent disregard in the first month of benefit computation; they may disregard 50 percent of earnings only.
[7] Two-parent units may disregard all earnings in excess of 35 hours a week for one parent and 24 hours a week for the other parent and $225 and 50 percent in the first 24 months. Thereafter, they may disregard $225 and 50 percent of the remainder. The disregard for earnings in excess of the participation requirement only applies to recipients for the first 24 months of benefit receipt, for both single- and two-parent units.
[8] The 100 percent disregard is only available once in a lifetime and may be received only if the recipient is newly employed at a job that is expected to be permanent for more than 20 hours a week.
[9] If a household member receives the 50 percent disregard for four consecutive months, the remaining months of the 12-month disregard cycle continue regardless of employment status. If a household member receives the 50 percent disregard for less than four months, then the 12-month cycle begins again at 50 percent upon reemployment. If a household member receives the 50 percent disregard and voluntarily terminates employment without good cause, the remaining months of the 12-month cycle continue as if the individual were employed.
[10] A $90 disregard is applied to the earned income of a parent who has reached his or her lifetime time limit.
[11] The four months need not be consecutive. Once the recipient has received four months of the 90 percent disregard, he or she is not eligible to receive the disregard again until the TANF case has been denied and remains denied for one full month, and 12 calendar months have passed since the denial. The 12-month ineligibility period begins with the first full month of denial after the client used the fourth month of the 90 percent disregard.
[12] To be eligible for the 50 percent disregards, the recipient must have received benefits in at least one of the previous four months.
[13] Married couples with a child in common may disregard $400.

Note: For information on the benefit standards, see table II.A.3.

[1] Two-parent units in which both parents are able to perform gainful activities will have their benefits reduced by 50 percent for the benefit months of July, August, and September.
[2] JOBSTART recipients receive wages from their subsidized employer. However, the state provides a supplemental payment for units whose adjusted gross income (earnings net of FICA and federal and state taxes) is less than the cash value of the food stamp and TANF benefits they would have otherwise received. The supplemental payment is determined by subtracting the unit's adjusted gross income from the cash value of its food stamp and TANF benefit.
[3] The benefit is equal to the Maximum Payment Level for the unit size if the unit's gross income is less than $446. However, if the gross income is greater than $446, the benefit will be reduced to 50 percent of the Maximum Payment Level. Arkansas refers to this policy as the Gross Income Trigger.
[4] The calculation applies to recipients with earned income only. The calculation for recipients without earned income is Transitional Standard minus net income. The calculation for recipients with earned and unearned income is the following: if the Family Wage Level minus earned income is less than the Transitional Standard, the benefit equals the Family Wage Level minus total net income (earned and unearned income). If the Family Wage Level minus earned income is greater than the Transitional Standard, the benefit equals the Transitional Standard minus unearned income. Also, the MFIP payment standards include the state's food stamp (FS) allotment. MFIP recipients' cash and FS grants are computed with the same calculation. A flat amount (based on family size) for the FS allotment is subtracted from the benefit amount, and any remaining amount is provided to the unit in cash. To calculate the TANF grant amount without FS, subtract the food portion of the MFIP standard from the benefit.
[5] If the benefit is positive and the unit is complying with all requirements, the Cooperative Incentive Payment is added to the benefit. (Most of the caseload receives the Incentive Payment). However, if the unit isn't complying with requirements, the unit only receives the difference between the Adjusted Income/Payment Standard and net income.
[6] The benefit is equal to the maximum of (A - C or B - D), where A equals the full benefit equivalent, the sum of welfare and food stamp benefits, calculated using normal rules. B equals the minimum benefit equivalent, A minus the difference between Adjusted Income/Payment Standard for the unit including the JOBS Plus participant and Adjusted Income/Payment Standard for the unit not including the JOBS Plus participant. C equals the JOBS Plus participant's wage times his or her available hours (all scheduled hours, regardless of whether the participant worked those hours), minus $90, $50 pass-through, $102 earned income credit refund, and any garnishment withheld. D equals the JOBS Plus participant's wage times hours actually worked, minus $90, $50 pass-through, $102 earned income credit refund, and any garnishment withheld.
[7] The benefit for two-parent units equals the lesser of (150 percent of (the Federal Poverty Level minus net income)), or (Payment Standard minus gross unearned income) or Maximum Benefit.
[8] Units in which a man and a woman are legally married to each other are eligible for a marriage incentive that increases the benefit by $100.
[9] Recipients in the Trial Jobs component participate in subsidized employment. These recipients do not receive benefits from the state. However, they receive earnings from their employer. Employers are required to pay at least minimum wage for every hour worked. The employer receives a maximum subsidy of $300 per employee per month.
[10] Units in the unsubsidized employment component receive wages from an unsubsidized job and are ineligible for a cash benefit; however, they may still receive support services if they are otherwise eligible.

Notes: This table provides information on the standards only. For information on how the standards are used, see table II.A.2.

The amounts in the table are based on the following assumptions about the assistance unit: there is one adult and two children; the children are not subject to a family cap; and the unit has no special needs, pays for shelter, and lives in the most populated area of the state.

[1] See the footnotes in table II.A.2 for a description of the standard.
[2] Applies to units that have received assistance for at least two months in a lifetime. For units receiving their first and second months of benefits, the Standard of Assistance for a family of three is $712.
[3] Minnesota's Transitional Standard includes the food stamp allotment for each unit size. The food stamp and cash benefit are computed together for welfare recipients. The food stamp allotment is a flat benefit, based on family size, which is subtracted from the benefit amount. Any remaining benefit is given to the unit as cash. The value of the TANF benefit only is in parentheses.
[4] If the unit is complying with all requirements, they receive the Cooperative Incentive Payment (most of the caseload does); however, if the unit isn't complying with requirements, they receive only the Adjusted Income/Payment Standard.
[5] The benefits in these components are based on the wages earned by individual participants.

Note: Maximum benefits are calculated assuming that the unit contains one adult and two children who are not subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for shelter, and lives in the most populated area of the state.

[1] Applies to units that have received assistance for at least two months in a lifetime. For units receiving their first and second months of benefits, the maximum benefit for a family of three is $712.
[2] The benefits in these components are based on the wages earned by individual recipients.

Requirements

III. Requirements

The tables in this chapter of the Databook describe the requirements for the individual members of an assistance unit as of July 2003. Numerous requirements may be imposed on a family in order for it to become and/or remain eligible for TANF. To receive benefits, most states require recipients to negotiate and sign contracts that detail what is required of individuals within the unit. These requirements vary considerably by state but can include requirements for dependent children, such as immunization and school attendance requirements, as well as requirements for the adult head of the household, such as work-related requirements.

The following two sections describe some of the requirements individuals within the unit must fulfill to become and remain eligible for assistance, including those related to behavior and work activities.

A. Once determined eligible, what must a recipient family do to maintain benefits?

Many types of behavioral requirements (requirements that attempt to influence or alter one's actions) may be imposed on individuals in the assistance unit. These requirements may affect adults and/or children in the unit and may include anything from requiring adult recipients to submit to drug testing to requiring dependent children to attain a minimum grade point average in school. Note that fulfilling behavioral requirements can be a condition of initial and/or continuing eligibility.

Behavioral requirements: Although behavioral requirements affect adults and minor parents in many states, this book only identifies requirements imposed on dependent children. The typical requirements sometimes imposed on dependent children include school, immunization, health screening, and other health requirements. The following describes these policies further:

- School:

  School policies may require children to attend school or to achieve at least a minimal grade point average. This book addresses only the school requirements imposed on dependent children, not those that may be imposed on minor parents (which are included in the WRD).

  States may also offer a school bonus, which provides financial incentives for assistance units whose children meet specific attendance or achievement standards. Unless otherwise noted, the school bonuses apply to both dependent children and minor parents.

- Immunization:

  These policies require parents to have their children immunized.

- Health screening:

  Health screening requirements may include regular checkups for both children and adults, although the requirements usually only apply to children.

- Other health requirements:

  Other health requirements primarily involve compliance with the rules of the Early and Periodic Screening, Diagnosis, and Treatment (EPSDT) program.

Table III.A.1 describes whether any requirements listed above are imposed on dependent children in the assistance unit for either initial and/or continuing eligibility. Requirements are only included in this table if (1) they are either explicitly mentioned in the manual as a requirement for cash assistance or recipients must sign a contract including one of the requirements to receive benefits; and (2) a sanction results from noncompliance. The table also describes whether the state provides school bonuses. The dollar amounts of bonuses, and the dollar amounts of sanctions for not complying with requirements, are not included in the table but are available in the WRD.

B. What work activities are required?

Under the TANF block grant, the federal government requires states to (1) meet the annual work participation rate determined by the federal government;[15] and (2) ensure that every recipient is working (as defined by the state) as soon as the state determines he or she is able or after 24 months of benefit receipt, whichever is earlier. Therefore, states require most adult heads of an assistance unit to perform some type of work-related activity after a given period. The activities available and the timing of the requirement vary greatly by state. Who is required to participate can also vary considerably. States may, and most do, exempt (or excuse) groups of recipients from participating in activities based on some demographic or individual characteristic. In cases where the recipient is not exempt but also not complying with activity requirements, the state may sanction the family by reducing or eliminating the unit's benefit. Below is a further discussion of these topics and the tables included in this section.

Work-related exemptions: States may, but are not required to, exempt certain individuals or groups from participating in work-related activities. Such an exemption does not, however, remove the individuals from the calculation of the state's federal work participation rate. The only category of recipient that may be removed from the denominator of the participation rate calculation is single parents of a child under 12 months old; such parents may or may not be exempted from participation requirements.

Table III.B.1 describes each state's key rules for exempting the single-parent head of an assistance unit from work-related requirements. An individual may be exempt if he or she works

[15] The work participation rate indicates what percentage of the state TANF caseload must be participating in work activities. Both the number of hours required to qualify for the rate and the percentage itself have increased annually since 1996. According to legislation, as of 2003, 50 percent of a state's single-parent caseload was required to participate a minimum of 30 hours a week. Two-parent families were required to participate at a rate of 90 percent for a minimum of 35 hours a week.

a specified number of hours in an unsubsidized job, is ill or incapacitated, is caring for an ill or incapacitated person, is elderly, is in a specified month of pregnancy, or is caring for a child under a specified age. These exemptions are the most common but are not an exhaustive list of work-related exemptions. For other exemption criteria, see the WRD.

Related tables: Table L6 provides the exemption for a parent caring for a young child from 1996 through 2003.

Work-related activities: Work programs vary widely from state to state based on several factors, including who must work, how much work is required, and what activities are considered work. Table III.B.2 provides a general overview of state activities requirements. The table describes when the recipient must begin participating, allowable activities the recipient could participate in, and how many hours the recipient must participate a week, including what share of those hours can be spent in education and training programs. Not all assistance units have the same work requirements. For simplicity, this table only includes the activities requirements for units headed by a single parent over age 20.

Users of this table should keep in mind that the caseworker manuals on which the WRD is based do not provide complete information about how these work requirements are implemented. In particular, caseworker manuals do not generally indicate the likelihood that a recipient will be assigned to one activity or another. Thus, two states could have the same potential activities but have very different policies in terms of how often different activities are assigned. Alternatively, one state might include a potential activity that is not listed in another state's list but in practice rarely assign anyone to that activity. Another complexity is that one state may explicitly state a particular type of recipient (such as one without a high school diploma) will always be assigned to a certain activity (such as education and training), whereas another state might not include such a provision in the manual but nevertheless be very likely to assign individuals without a diploma to educational activities. Despite these limitations, the table provides a starting point for understanding the range of work-related requirements across states.

Work-related sanctions: If adults required to participate in activities do not comply with requirements, the state can sanction the unit. States have discretion to define what constitutes noncompliance and what will result from the noncompliance. Typically, if a recipient does not participate in his or her assigned activities for the specified number of hours, he or she is not complying and could be sanctioned. A sanction generally results in the removal of the noncomplying individual from the unit for benefit computation, a percent reduction in the entire unit's benefit, or a full benefit sanction.[16] Often states increase the severity of the sanction based on the number of times or the amount of time the individual is noncompliant.

Table III.B.3 describes sanction policies for failing to comply with work requirements. The table provides both the initial sanction (for the first instance of noncompliance) and the most severe sanction (after multiple instances of noncompliance). For both the initial and most severe sanctions, the table describes the amount of the reduction in benefits and the duration of the sanction. When the sanction is described as "adult portion of the benefit," the state recomputes benefits using an assistance unit size that excludes the noncompliant adult. (If the adult has any income, some or all of it is deemed available to the children to prevent an increase in benefit.) The WRD includes more details on sanctions, including any sanctions that occur in between the initial and most severe sanctions.

Related tables: Table L7 describes the most severe sanction for 1996 through 2003.

[16] The federal government requires that the minimum state sanction for noncompliance with work requirements be a pro rata reduction in benefits.

[1] School requirements apply only to requirements for dependent children, not minor parents. A requirement is coded "Yes" only if the state explicitly mentions it as a requirement for cash assistance and/or as an item in a contract and a sanction results from noncompliance. These policies may require children to attend school, to achieve at least a minimal grade point average, and/or parents to be involved in their children's education in some way.
[2] This variable captures financial incentives for assistance units whose children meet specific attendance or achievement standards. Unless otherwise noted, school bonuses apply to both dependent children and minor parents.
[3] Immunization requirements include information on standard immunizations for children. A requirement is coded "Yes" only if the state explicitly mentions it as a requirement for cash assistance and/or as an item in a contract and a sanction results from noncompliance.
[4] Health screening requirements include information on regular checkups for both children and adults, although the requirements usually apply only to children. A requirement is coded "Yes" only if the state explicitly mentions it as a requirement for cash assistance and/or as an item in a contract and a sanction results from noncompliance.
[5] Other health requirements include information on other health-related requirements such as early and periodic screening, diagnosis, and treatment (EPSDT). A requirement is coded "Yes" only if the state explicitly mentions it as a requirement for cash assistance and/or as an item in a contract and a sanction results from noncompliance.
[6] School bonuses only apply to pregnant or parenting teens, age 16 through 19, who maintain a "C" average in school or graduate from high school or its equivalent.
[7] School bonuses only apply to teen parents, age 16 through 19.
[8] New Jersey state law requires all dependent children to be immunized regardless of whether they receive TANF benefits. However, welfare recipients' benefits may be sanctioned if they do not immunize their dependent children. Recipients are required to sign an IRP contract to receive benefits; an immunization requirement may be included in the IRP. If the recipient fails to immunize his or her children, he or she breaches the contract and receives a financial sanction.

[1] This table refers to single-parent unit heads over 21 years old.
[2] If the incapacitated person is an adult, the caretaker is exempt only if he or she is related to the person and providing 24 hour care.
[3] The caretaker loses this exemption after retaining it for 12 cumulative months. While the caretaker is exempt, he or she may be required to participate in job-readiness activities.
[4] To be exempt, the job must pay at least the minimum wage and be expected to last at least 30 days.
[5] The parent may only receive exemptions for a total of 12 months in his or her lifetime. He or she may use any combination of exemptions in which he or she is eligible to accumulate these 12 months.
[6] Counties have the option to vary some activities exemptions. Statewide exemptions are noted; all other exemptions apply to Los Angeles County only.
[7] Statewide exemption.
[8] A pregnant woman may qualify for an exemption if the pregnancy is disabling and prohibits her from participating in work or training programs.
[9] The recipient may only receive this exemption once; however, he or she may also receive a limited exemption for a second or subsequent child under six months old.
[10] Counties have the option to vary activities exemptions. These policies refer to Denver County.
[11] The exemption does not apply to recipients who have received benefits for 24 or more cumulative months.
[12] A pregnant or postpartum recipient may qualify for an exemption if her physician indicates that she is unable to work.
[13] The exemption only applies if the child under 12 months old is not subject to a family cap.
[14] The hours apply to recipients with children age 6 or older. Recipients with children under 6 years old are required to work 20 hours to be exempt.
[15] Recipients are screened during assessment for physical and/or mental incapacities that interfere with their ability to participate in countable work activities. After a medical evaluation confirms incapacity, the client is moved from TANF to district-funded POWER. POWER requires limited work activities.
[16] The exemption applies only if no alternative care is available.
[17] Recipients may be required to attend classes or other activities.
[18] The exemption is limited to once in the recipient’s lifetime.
[19] To be exempt, the recipient must have had the condition for at least 30 days.
[20] While the determination of a medical barrier is pending or under appeal, the unit member is exempt.
[21] A unit head who has a severely incapacitated child in his or her home who is approved under the Home and Community-Based Care Program is exempt. The child does not need to be a member of the assistance unit. A client who is approved to provide full-time care due to the medical condition of a related child under age 18 (not a waiver child) or spouse living in the home is also exempt.
[22] Although exempt from activities requirements, persons caring for children under 12 months old could be asked to participate in the following activities: counseling, health-related education, group activities, and attending forums with information about child care and educational opportunities.
[23] If the participant has a newborn child, absence from activities is determined using the standards of the Family Leave Act of 1993. The maximum time available for one parent is 12 workweeks during any 12-month period and for two parents is the aggregate of 12 workweeks of leave for both parents.
[24] The individual is exempt through the month the child turns 1.
[25] The state does not consider these groups technically exempt; however, they may meet the state’s criteria for good cause for noncompliance or deferral.
[26] The exemption is limited to 12 months in the recipient’s lifetime.
[27] To be exempt, the head of household must be caring for a spouse who is receiving SSI.
[28] To be exempt, the job must pay minimum wage or higher.
[29] The exemption is limited to 12 months unless the individual has applied for SSI and the application is approved, pending, or in appeal.

[30] This is a one-time exemption for the first child only.
[31] Recipients in this component are automatically exempt from activities requirements. The criteria for inclusion in this component may include some exemptions listed in this table; see appendix 1 for more information on the composition of the component.
[32] The caretaker is exempt only when caring for a child who is an SSI recipient, an SSI applicant, or suffers from a physical or mental impairment that meets federal SSI disability standards.
[33] Mothers are exempt from activities requirements for three months after giving birth when the newborn is in the home or for postpartum recovery when the newborn is not in the home.
[34] A pregnant woman may qualify for an exemption if the pregnancy has resulted in a professionally certified disability that prevents the woman from obtaining or retaining employment.
[35] To meet this exemption there must be no other satisfactory alternative plan or care available.
[36] Recipients meeting this exemption criteria are placed in the Non–Time Limited Assistance component. See appendix 1 for more information on the composition of the component.
[37] The recipient is only exempt from job training requirements.
[38] A pregnant woman may qualify for an exemption from job training requirements if a physician determines she is unable to work.
[39] People who are temporarily ill or incapacitated are exempt until their illness or incapacity improves or passes.
[40] Recipients who have received 39 or more months of assistance will not receive an exemption for pregnancy.
[41] Recipients who have received 39 or more months of assistance will not receive a child care exemption. Recipients that conceive a child while on assistance are exempt only until the child is 12 months old.
[42] Recipients in their fourth month of pregnancy may be exempt if a physician certifies a medical reason exists.
[43] The exemption may be extended if a physician certifies it is medically necessary for the parent or child.
[44] The exemption can be extended for up to six weeks beyond the end of the pregnancy.
[45] The exemption may last for no more than 12 months in a recipient's lifetime and no more than three months for any one child unless the social services official makes a determination to extend the exemption for up to the total 12 months.
[46] The exemption does not apply to individuals under the age of 25 with no high school diploma or GED.
[47] To qualify for the exemption, the caretaker must prove that he or she is needed in the home full-time to care for a disabled child or adult relative who lives in the home.
[48] To be exempt, the recipient must be earning at least $700 a month.
[49] The exemption applies only if a recipient has a mental or physical disability that is expected to last more than 180 days.
[50] A pregnant woman may qualify for an exemption if she is deemed unable to work by a physician.
[51] If the recipient cares for a child under 24 months old, work requirements may be modified or deferred. A participant's work requirement cannot be deferred for this reason for more than 24 months during a lifetime. If the participant has exhausted the 24 months of deferment and has a child under 13 weeks old, then the caretaker is automatically exempt from all work requirements.
[52] To be exempt, the recipient must provide a physician's note certifying that he or she is incapacitated, the nature and scope of incapacity, and the abilities and limitations of the individual, as well as the duration of the incapacity. If the individual can participate in employment or training but is limited in the types of activities that he or she may participate in, the individual must participate in work activities that are determined suitable. If a doctor determines an individual is temporarily incapacitated, a caseworker must reevaluate the case after the prescribed duration of incapacitation or every 60 days, whichever comes first.
[53] Recipients caring for a child subject to a family cap are only exempt while the child is under six weeks old.
[54] The exemption applies only to a woman giving birth to a second or subsequent child. She can be exempt for a total of six months for this child and may include the last trimester of pregnancy. Fathers cannot claim this exemption during pregnancy but can claim a six-month exemption after the birth. For the first child, a recipient is only exempt due to pregnancy if there are complications with the pregnancy.
[55] The exemption applies only to the birth of a first child. The recipient is exempted for only six months after the birth of any additional child (the six months include any time the recipient chooses to be exempt during pregnancy).
[56] A recipient's care for an ill or incapacitated family member may be assigned as his or her participation requirement.

Note: The table contains the activity requirements for single-parent recipients 21 years old or older.

* Data not obtained.

[1] All possible activities include:
(a) Job-related activities include one or more of the following: job skills training, job readiness activities, job development and placement, job search.
(b) Education and training (E&T) activities include one or more of the following: basic or remedial education, high school/GED, English as a second language, postsecondary education, on-the-job training.
(c) Employment activities include one or more of the following: unsubsidized job, work supplement/subsidized job, CWEP/AWEP, community service.
[2] The hours apply to recipients with children age 6 or older. Recipients with children under 6 years old are required to work 20 hours.
[3] According to the state manuals, recipients move from one set of activities to another after a set period of time. Generally, they begin with job-related activities and end with employment; see the WRD for details.
[4] Counties have the option to vary their activity requirements. These policies refer to Denver County.
[5] The hours requirement is 10 hours a week of job search plus participation in CWEP up to the number of hours equal to the benefit amount divided by the minimum wage. If the recipient is working 20 hours or more a week in an unsubsidized job, no additional work requirements apply.
[6] On-the-job training and work supplementation require a full-time (32 to 40 hour) commitment.
[7] When the agency determines it possible, the recipient must participate for a minimum of 40 hours a week.

[8] Recipients with children under the age of 12 weeks are only required to participate in life skills training.
[9] Participation must be either equivalent to the level of commitment required for full-time employment or deemed significant enough to move the recipient toward the level of full-time employment.
[10] Recipients in this component are not required to participate in work activities (see appendix 1 for a description of components).
[11] The hours apply to recipients with children age 6 or older. Recipients with children under age 6 generally have no work requirements.
[12] The hours apply to recipients with children age 6 or older. Recipients with children under age 6 are required to work 20 hours. On-the-job training requires a minimum of 35 hours a week.
[13] The hours apply to recipients with children age 6 or older. Recipients with children under age 6 are required to work 20 hours. An individual must participate in educational programs (including vocational training) full time as defined by the school, and in job search/job readiness (combined) for 40 hours a week.
[14] Recipients with children under age 6 may not be required to work more than 24 hours a week.
[15] Educational Works Program activities are focused on education and training; however, with program approval, participants may also participate in any other activity relevant to their education and pursuant to the New Mexico Works Cash Assistance Program.
[16] Recipients volunteer for the JOBS Plus program. This program provides on-the-job training, while paying benefits as wages from a work-site assignment.
[17] For the first 24 months of benefit receipt, recipients may spend all required activity hours in education or training. For parents with children under the age of 6, this is 20 hours.
[18] Recipients in postsecondary education and training programs (programs in which participants must have a GED or high school diploma to enroll) may attend education and training activities for up to 20 hours a week.
[19] The state stressed that recipients are required to work 40 hours a week, but in cases where the recipient is unable to work the full 40 hours, caseworkers can scale back the number of hours (not to go below 30).
[20] The state stressed that recipients are required to work 40 hours a week, but in cases where the recipient is unable to work the full 40 hours, caseworkers can scale back the number of hours (not to go below 30). The 30 hours apply to recipients with children over the age of 6. Recipients with children under age 6 are required to work 20 hours.

Note: "Adult portion of benefit" describes the portion of the benefit the sanctioned individual would have received. Since the table only represents sanctions for single-parent adults, in all cases the sanctioned individual is an adult.

[+] The unit is sanctioned for the specified number of months or until the sanctioned individual complies with the activity requirements, whichever is longer.

* Data not obtained.

[1] For the seventh and subsequent months of noncompliance, the caseworker has discretion to either reduce the unit's benefits by 50 percent or close the case. If the case is closed, the unit may reapply for their full benefits, but the application will be pending until the unit has complied with requirements for two weeks.
[2] Counties have the option to determine the amount and duration of sanctions. These policies refer to Denver County.
[3] Cash assistance may still be provided to the children in the unit who are under age 16; these benefits are issued to a protective payee.
[4] If noncompliance continues after three months of reduced benefits, the entire unit is ineligible for benefits until compliance.
[5] The sanctioned parent must also sign a family investment agreement and complete 20 hours of eligible education or work activities to become eligible again. The sanction continues until the parent fully complies.
[6] The pro rata portion of the benefit equals the total monthly benefit divided by the number of members in the unit.
[7] A caseworker's judgment may be used to determine whether the unit must be in compliance for two weeks before regaining benefits.
[8] Recipients in this component are not required to participate in work activities; therefore, they have no sanctions (see appendix 1 for a description of components).
[9] The initial sanction does not reduce benefits. Recipients are given a written warning detailing the consequences of subsequent failures to comply.
[10] If noncompliance continues for more than a month after the end of the sanction period, the case is closed for noncompliance. The unit may reapply for benefits after a one-month period of ineligibility.
[11] If noncompliance continues for more than a month after the end of the sanction period, the case is closed and the unit must reapply for benefits. If requirements are met, the case remains open and only the adult portion of the benefit is removed for the duration of the sanction or until compliance.
[12] During the first month, the benefit is reduced by one-third or a pro rata share, whichever is greater. If the unit does not comply during the first month, the benefit is reduced by two-thirds or a pro rata share, whichever is greater for one month. If the unit does not comply within the month, the entire benefit is removed for three months or until compliance, whichever is longer.
[13] The adjusted payment standard refers to the new benefit amount once the adult portion is removed.
[14] If noncompliance continues after three months of reduced benefits, the case is closed and the unit must reapply for further assistance.
[15] If noncompliance continues after three months, the case is closed and the unit must reapply for further assistance.
[16] The individual is placed on probationary status for the following school term to improve GPA or meet the educational institution's standards.
[17] At the end of the probationary period, if standards have not been met or an overall GPA of 2.5 has not been achieved, the department may take action to terminate an individual's participation in the Educational Works Program.
[18] If noncompliance continues after one month of reduced benefits, the case is closed.
[19] If the adult is noncompliant for one month or less, only the adult portion of the benefit is removed. If noncompliance continues after one month of reduced benefits, the case is closed.
[20] This applies to noncompliance that occurs after the first 24 months of assistance. For noncompliances that occur within the first 24 months of assistance, the needs of the sanctioned individual are not included for benefit calculation.
[21] This applies to noncompliance that occurs after the first 24 months of assistance. For noncompliances that occur within the first 24 months of assistance, the needs of the sanctioned individual are permanently excluded for benefit calculation.
[22] If the individual is noncompliant for one to six months, 110 percent of the adult portion of the benefit is deducted from the unit's benefit. For seven to 12 months of noncompliance, 120 percent of the adult portion of the benefit is deducted from the unit's benefit. Months 13–18, 130 percent reduction. Months 19–24, 140 percent reduction. Following 24 months of noncompliance, the reduction is decreased to 100 percent of the adult's portion of the benefit, but the entire remaining benefit must be made to a protective payee. The individual is sanctioned until he or she is in compliance for two weeks.
[23] If noncompliance continues after two months of reduced benefits, the entire unit is ineligible for benefits until compliance.

[24] The entire unit is ineligible if the adult is in noncompliance for two or more months. If the adult is noncompliant for less than two months, only $100 of the benefit is removed.
[25] If the individual fails to comply by the fourth month, the $75 sanction increases to $150. However, if the individual has received assistance for more than 60 months and already has 12 or more cumulative months of sanctions, the $150 sanction amount increases to $225. During the first six cumulative months the unit is sanctioned, the amount of the sanction may be limited to protect the family's ability to pay its housing costs. This may be extended for another six months if the family had previously received assistance for 36 months without sanctions.
[26] The sanction remains in effect until the individual is compliant for four weeks; after four weeks of compliance, benefits are restored to their presanction level and the individual is paid retroactively for the four weeks of compliance.
[27] If a recipient refuses to participate in an activity for the third time, the unit is ineligible to receive benefits in that component for life. The unit may receive benefits again if they become eligible for a different component (see appendix 1 for a description of components).
[28] If a recipient has an unplanned and/or unexcused absence, the Trial Jobs employer has the discretion to decrease the recipient's wages. If a Trial Jobs recipient completely refuses to participate in the Trial Jobs component, he or she receives two warnings from the TANF agency and then becomes ineligible for the Trial Jobs component for life.

Ongoing Eligibility

IV. Ongoing Eligibility

The tables in this chapter of the Databook describe key aspects of the rules that affect recipients' ongoing eligibility as of July 2003. After a family applies for assistance and passes all eligibility tests, its members become recipients and a benefit is calculated. However, the recipient unit still faces eligibility requirements that affect its ability to continue receiving benefits. Most states impose income and asset tests on recipients, which generally differ from the initial eligibility tests for applicants. When the requirements differ, states typically allow recipients more generous eligibility thresholds.

Recipients' reproductive choices and the number of months they have received assistance may also affect eligibility and benefits. Some states impose family cap policies on recipients, which restrict benefits from increasing when a child is born to a family while on assistance. Almost all states now impose time limits, which reduce or eliminate benefits to recipients based on their accumulated total months of benefit receipt.

The following three sections describe the eligibility requirements that affect the ongoing eligibility of recipients.

A. What eligibility tests must recipient families pass for continuing eligibility?

Like applicants, recipients must pass both nonfinancial and financial tests to remain eligible for assistance each month. The nonfinancial rules do not generally vary for applicants and recipients; however, for some rules, such as two-parent eligibility, they may. Unlike nonfinancial rules, the financial rules often differ for applicants and recipients. The following provides more information on those eligibility rules that tend to differ for applicants and recipients, including two-parent hours tests, treatment of child support income, asset tests, income eligibility tests, and maximum income for ongoing eligibility.

Two-parent eligibility for recipients: For states providing benefits to two-parent families, table IV.A.1 describes special eligibility rules imposed on two-parent recipients where neither parent is disabled ("UP," or unemployed-parent families, in the former AFDC program).[17] In addition to the standard eligibility tests that all recipient units must pass, some states impose "hours tests" on two-parent units. Under an hours test, the unit is not eligible if the principal wage earner is working more than a specified number of hours a month. States may apply this rule when determining the initial and/or continuing eligibility of two-parent families.

Related tables: See table I.B.2 for details on the hours test for applicants and table L2 for information on the rules for two-parent units from 1996 through 2003.

Treatment of child support income: Table IV.A.2 describes each state's treatment of child support income for recipients. TANF recipients are required to assign their child support income to the state. The state then decides what portion, if any, of the child support collected is returned to the family as unearned income and how much of that income counts as income for eligibility and benefit computation.[18] The amount of income transferred and disregarded may differ for eligibility calculations and benefit computation.

The first column of the table displays the amount of collected child support that is counted for recipients' eligibility determination. Typically, states count all child support collected or all but $50 of the amount when considering eligibility, even if the state does not transfer any of the support directly to the family. Those states that do not count the child support for eligibility typically establish some method to ensure that families with high and continuing child support amounts do not remain on the rolls indefinitely.

[17] North Dakota no longer provides TANF benefits to two-parent, nondisabled units. Also, in some states, benefits are provided to two-parent units under a "separate state program" funded by state monies rather than the TANF grant. The table includes those states as providing benefits to two-parent families regardless of the funding source.
[18] States are required to pay a share (equal to the state's Medicaid match rate) of all child support collected on behalf of TANF recipients to the federal government. States may still provide all child support collected to the recipient; in that case, the state must use other funds to pay the federal share.

The second column of the table shows what portion of the collected child support is transferred to the family as unearned income, while the third column indicates how much of that transferred amount is disregarded for benefit computation. The traditional $50 "pass-through" that states allowed under AFDC would be represented in this table with a "$50" coded in both the second and third columns; $50 is transferred to the unit as unearned income, and of that amount, all $50 is disregarded for benefit computation.

Asset limits for recipients: Table IV.A.3 describes each state's asset tests for recipients. States determine the maximum amount of assets, including vehicles and restricted assets, a family may hold and still remain eligible for benefits.

The first column of the table provides the limit on the value of unrestricted assets a family may hold and still be eligible for assistance. Unrestricted assets include the cash value of any asset the state counts toward the limit, regardless of the asset's purpose. Limits may vary for determining the initial eligibility versus continuing eligibility.

The second column describes whether some of or all the value of a vehicle(s) is excluded in determining the amount of a family's assets for eligibility purposes. When a portion of the vehicle's value is exempted, that value may be given in terms of equity or fair market value. The fair market value is the amount for which the vehicle could be sold, while the equity value is the fair market value minus any amount still owed on the vehicle. When a family still owes money on a vehicle, the equity value will be less than the fair market value, so this distinction is important when comparing vehicle exemption amounts across states.

The last three columns of the table describe whether the state excludes a portion of assets deposited into savings accounts when earmarked for specific purposes and whether the state deposits additional matching funds into these accounts. For instance, a unit may be allowed to save money toward education or the purchase of a home without having that money count toward their overall asset limit. Some, but not all, restricted accounts are federally defined Individual Development Accounts (IDAs). In the table, those accounts that states specify as IDAs are distinguished from other restricted accounts.

Restricted accounts may or may not include a match, under which a third party, generally the state, contributes additional funds to the amount the family has saved. The match rate is typically defined by the state.

Related tables: See tables L8 and L9 for information on asset rules in effect from 1996 through 2003. See table I.C.1 for the asset tests applied at application.

Income eligibility tests for recipients: Table IV.A.4 describes states' rules for the income eligibility tests that determine whether a recipient (whose income may have increased since initial eligibility) is eligible to continue receiving benefits. The table indicates which state income standard is used for each test. To determine the value of the particular standard for a family size of three, see table I.E.3.

This table describes the income tests imposed in addition to the implicit income test imposed by benefit computation. Even if a family passes all eligibility tests, it is possible in some states that the family will not qualify for a positive benefit under the state's benefit computation formula. In those cases, the family will not receive a benefit. In some cases, states have streamlined their eligibility policies and do not perform any income tests other than the implicit test imposed by benefit computation. In these states, the table indicates "No explicit tests."

Related tables: As mentioned above, table I.E.3 provides the eligibility standard(s) used to determine eligibility for a three-person family. Tables I.D.1, I.D.2, and IV.A.2 describe policies concerning the deeming of income from grandparents and stepparents, and child support income that may be used in determining gross income for income eligibility tests. Table I.E.2 describes the earned income disregards that may be used for net income tests.

In addition, the tables in sections I.B, I.D, I.E, and II are relevant to ongoing eligibility. In most states, recipients are required to pass both nonfinancial and financial tests to continue receiving benefits.

Maximum income for ongoing eligibility for a family of three: Table IV.A.5 synthesizes the various financial rules related to ongoing eligibility in order to provide information on the maximum amount of income a family of three can earn and still remain eligible for assistance in various months (2, 7, 13, and 25) of combining work and welfare. The maximum income for ongoing eligibility is a calculation that incorporates information on the income eligibility rules for recipients, earned income disregards for eligibility and benefit computation, benefit computation policies, and the eligibility and payment standards. The calculation determines the maximum amount of earnings a recipient can have and still be "technically" eligible for assistance in each state. Technical eligibility does not mean the unit will necessarily receive a cash benefit, but it will have passed all eligibility tests and be eligible for some positive amount. Most states only distribute a cash benefit if it is over $10.

The calculation assumes the assistance unit includes one parent and two children, has only earned income, has no child care expenses, contains no children subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for all shelter costs with no subsidies, and is subject to the benefit standard that applies to the majority of the state's caseload.

Related tables: Table I.E.4 provides information on the amount of earnings an applicant may have and become eligible for assistance. Table L3 provides this information for 1996 through 2003.

B. Are children eligible if born while the family receives benefits?

Benefits to recipients who give birth to a child while receiving aid may or may not be affected by the addition of the child to the assistance unit. Under AFDC, when a child was born to a member of an assistance unit, the benefit increased to meet the needs of the new child; however, many states have changed this policy. Family cap policies, as most states refer to them, prevent or limit an increase in a family's benefit when another child is born. In these states, the benefit increase an assistance unit would otherwise receive for adding another member to the unit will be limited. Some states provide a percentage of the increase to the unit, while others provide no additional funds to the unit for the addition of a child.

Family caps: Table IV.B.1 describes states' family cap policies. The table first indicates whether the state imposes a family cap, and then provides the number of months following the case opening after which a newborn child is excluded from the assistance unit. The table also describes the impact on the benefit when an additional child is born (whether there is no increase in benefit, or some increase smaller than what would occur in the absence of a family cap). In some cases, the amount of cash paid directly to the family does not increase, but the increment that would have been paid in the absence of the policy is instead paid to a third party or provided in the form of a voucher. That information is noted in the table as "third-party payment" or "voucher" and is explained further in the footnotes. States with "disregard" increase the earned income disregards for families that have a capped child; again, more details are provided in the footnotes. The table also indicates how long a cap, once applied, endures. The table indicates "always capped" if a family is never able to regain benefits for a capped child, even after the case has been closed for a period. Otherwise, the table provides the number of months a family must remain off the rolls for the cap to be removed, that is, for the child to be included in the benefit computation should the family apply for assistance again. States conducting demonstration projects that subject units to a family cap in a few counties, but not statewide, are footnoted.

Related tables: Table L10 indicates the presence of family cap policies in 1996 through 2003.

C. How long can a family receive benefits?

Since the passage of PRWORA, almost all states have limited the number of months an assistance unit may receive benefits. The type and length of these limits vary from state to state. There are two basic types of limits that states impose on recipients: "lifetime time limits," which eliminate part of or the entire benefit permanently, and "other time limits," which interrupt or limit benefits for a certain period but do not eliminate them permanently. Both types may terminate benefits to either the entire unit or just the adults in the unit. In addition, some states impose only lifetime limits or only other time limits; other states impose a combination of the two types.

Not all assistance units are subject to time limits, however. States may continue to provide benefits to up to 20 percent of their caseload (referred to as the hardship exemption) beyond the federal 60-month time limit. The individuals receiving these exemptions (which "stop the time limit clock" for a month) or extensions (which add a month of assistance after reaching the time limit) are determined on a state-by-state basis and are eligible to receive federal TANF funds as long as the circumstances that caused their exemption or extension exist.

Lifetime time limit: Under TANF, the federal government imposed a maximum 60-month lifetime limit on receipt of TANF funds. Therefore, after 60 months of receiving federally funded TANF benefits, either consecutively or nonconsecutively, an assistance unit is generally no longer eligible for federal cash assistance.[19] Some states have adopted shorter lifetime limits, while others have chosen to fund recipients after the 60 months with state dollars. A few states have also chosen to terminate benefits only for the adults in the unit, in which case all children in the assistance unit remain eligible for benefits after the lifetime limit expires.

Table IV.C.1 describes states' lifetime time limit policies. The first column indicates the total months in which the state allows benefits, while the second and third columns identify whose benefits are terminated.

Other time limits: States have developed several other time limits that interrupt or limit benefits. These limits are imposed instead of or in addition to the lifetime time limits, and include periodic limits and benefit waiting periods. Under a periodic limit, a unit (or the head of the unit) may receive benefits for only a specified number of months in a given period. For example, a state may impose a 12- out of 24-month periodic limit on the unit, in which the unit is eligible to receive only 12 months of benefits in any 24-month period. Under a benefit waiting period, an assistance unit (or the head of the unit) is ineligible for benefits for a specified number of months after the unit has received benefits for another specified number of months. To use the 12 and 24 example again, in this case, the unit may receive 12 months of assistance and is then ineligible for 24 months. This means that the unit may receive 12 months of benefits over any period but after it receives its 12th month of assistance, it will be ineligible for benefits for the next 24 months. Both the periodic limit and the benefit waiting period limit may apply to the entire unit or just the adult head of the unit.

Table IV.C.2 describes other state time limit policies.[20] The first column describes the type of other time limit imposed, while the second and third columns identify whose benefits are terminated.

Exemptions and extensions: Exemption and extension policies are important for understanding the time limits in the states. Exemptions and extensions could significantly increase the number of months, beyond the state and/or federal time limit, that an assistance unit may receive benefits and, depending on the criteria, a substantial portion of the caseload could be exempted or extended.

Tables IV.C.3 and IV.C.4 describe time limit exemption and extension policies, respectively. The exemption and extension policies for both lifetime limits and other limits are displayed in the table. If the policies do not apply to both types of limits, the policies for the lifetime limit are displayed in the table and the policies for the other limit are footnoted.

[20] The table includes only those time limits that affect the majority of units. For a description of time limits affecting other groups, see the WRD.

* Data not obtained.

[1] This table describes the treatment of child support collected by the state on behalf of a TANF recipient and does not cover the treatment of child support received by the family directly from the absent parent. Child support collections may be counted as income for eligibility purposes regardless of whether they are transferred to the family; however, child support retained by the state is never counted for benefit computation purposes. Although many states have created unique child support policies, some states still provide families with the traditional $50 "pass-through" used under AFDC. The traditional pass-through is represented in this table with "All but $50" in the first column, and "$50" in the second and third columns. Also, this table does not cover the transfer of child support payments in excess of current or total TANF benefits.

[2] Any child support collected on behalf of a child subject to a family cap is transferred to the family and treated as exempt income.

[3] In addition to the $50 pass-through payment, Delaware provides a supplemental child support payment. This payment is calculated by subtracting a recipient's current disposable income from his or her disposable income as it would have been calculated in 1975.

[4] Some states coded "None" have no eligibility tests for recipients other than benefit computation; others have tests but do not count child support. States that do not count any child support collections for calculating recipients' eligibility generally use other methods to ensure that families with high and continuing child support amounts do not remain on the rolls indefinitely.

[5] The amount of child support collected or the amount of unmet need (also known as the gap payment), whichever is smaller, is transferred to the family as unearned income and disregarded for eligibility and benefit determination purposes. The unmet need or gap is calculated as [(the Standard of Need for the unit's family size minus the Maximum Benefit for the unit's family size) minus the unit's net income]. For units affected by the family cap, the amount of unmet need is calculated using the Standard of Need for the family size that includes the capped child, but using the maximum grant that excludes the capped child.

[6] The amount of the state supplement is calculated by taking 46 percent of the total child support payment made to the state Child Support Enforcement Agency.

[7] In addition to the pass-through, the amount of unmet need (also known as the gap payment) is transferred. The unmet need or gap is calculated by subtracting the unit's Maximum Benefit (the maximum benefit a unit is able to receive) from its Standard of Need; the unit's net income is then subtracted from this amount. The amount left is the amount of unmet need for that unit. After the pass-through, the state will transfer child support in the amount of unmet need for the family, up to the amount of child support collected.

[8] All child support collected on behalf of a child subject to the family cap is transferred to the family. For children subject to the family cap, the first $90 of unearned income, including child support, is disregarded for eligibility and benefit computation; the rest is counted.

[9] The gap payment equals 63.7 percent of the smaller of (retained child support for the month) or (the maximum amount that would not make the family ineligible for TANF if counted as income). The state defines the term "retained child support" as the amount equal to the smaller of the current month's collection, the basic TANF award for the month, or the current monthly obligation (excluding arrears).

[10] The amount of child support collected or the amount of unmet need (also known as the gap payment), whichever is smaller, is transferred to the family as unearned income and disregarded for eligibility and benefit determination. The unmet need or gap is calculated by subtracting the maximum benefit a unit is able to receive from its Consolidated Need Standard; the unit's net income is then subtracted from this amount. The amount left is the amount of unmet need.

[11] The state will add to the TANF payment the least of (1) the court-ordered payment amount, (2) the amount the Office of the Attorney General received during that month, or (3) $50. This additional money is considered an addition to the TANF benefit, not a pass-through of child support income. This money will be disregarded for eligibility purposes.

[12] The TANF Match Payment equals all the child support collected in excess of the $50 pass-through. It is added to the TANF payment and is considered an addition to the TANF benefit, not a pass-through of child support income.

[13] A $25 Child Support Incentive Payment is added to the monthly TANF benefit whenever any child support is collected. It is considered an addition to the TANF benefit, not a pass-through of child support income.

[E] Equity value of the vehicle.
[F] Fair market value of the vehicle.

* Data not obtained.
[1] Units including an elderly person may exempt $3,000; all other units exempt $2,000.
[2] Vehicles used as a home, to produce self-employment income, to transport a disabled family member, or to participate in an approved work activity are also exempt.
[3] Recreational vehicles are not exempt.
[4] One vehicle per household is exempt if equipped for a handicapped person, used to obtain medical treatment, or used for employment.
[5] Counties have the option to determine the amount of IDA accounts.
[6] The unit may exempt $9,500 of the equity value of a vehicle or the entire value of one vehicle used to transport a handicapped person.
[7] Amount depends upon the savings goal agreed upon by the participant and the Regional Work Board.
[8] The match rate is determined on a case-by-case basis and cannot exceed $1,500 a year.
[9] If the vehicle is used to look for work or to travel to work or education and training, the unit may exclude $4,650 of the value. If the vehicle is not used for these purposes, $1,500 of the equity value will be excluded. If the vehicle is used more than 50 percent of the time to produce income or as a dwelling, it is totally excluded.
[10] The value of one specially equipped vehicle used to transport a disabled family member is also exempt and vehicles with a fair market value under $1,500 are exempt.
[11] The asset limit is based on unit size: one person receives $2,000, two persons receive $3,000, and three or more receive another $50 for each additional person.
[12] When the assistance unit owns more than one vehicle, the one of greater value is exempted.
[13] Deposits must come from earned income and all deposits must be matched by state or local government or through contributions made by a nonprofit entity.

[14] The state matches $0.50 for every dollar of a recipient's assets. In addition, $0.50 of federal funds are added to the recipient's IDA account.
[15] Only liquid resources will be considered for eligibility determinations. Liquid resources include cash, checking and savings accounts, CDs, stocks and bonds, and money market accounts.
[16] Up to $10,000 of nonrecurring lump sum income may be disregarded if used within 30 days.
[17] Community agencies will contribute matching funds up to $2,000 a year.
[18] The state compares the value of the vehicle to two standards: $10,000 of the fair market value and $5,000 of the equity value. If the value of the vehicle exceeds either limit, the excess counts toward the asset limit; however, if the value of the vehicle exceeds both limits, only the excess of the greater amount shall count toward the asset limit.
[19] Recreational vehicles (unless used as a home), all terrain vehicles (ATVs), and other off-road vehicles are not exempt. Additionally, industrial vehicles (i.e., heavy haulers, pulpwood trucks, etc.) are exempt as long as they are used for income-producing purposes over 50 percent of the time, or as long as they annually produce income consistent with their fair market value. Determination of whether to count a vehicle is made on a case-by-case basis.
[20] $1,500 of the equity of the unit's second vehicle is exempt.
[21] All income-producing vehicles are also exempt.
[22] The asset limit is based on unit size: one person receives $4,000, two or more persons receive $6,000.
[23] The entire vehicle is exempt only if used for employment, training, or medical transportation; any motor vehicle used as a home is also exempt.
[24] Individuals can only deposit earned income into the IDA; the amount of earned will be considered an earned income disregard in determining eligibility and benefit amounts.
[25] Units with two adults may exempt up to $4,650 of the fair market value of a second vehicle if it is essential for work, training, or transportation of a handicapped individual.
[26] The total limit is $3,500; however, only $1,500 of that amount can be in liquid resources and only $2,000 can be in nonliquid resources. Liquid resources include the (convertible) cash value of life insurance policies, cash, stocks, bonds, negotiable notes, purchase contracts, and other similar assets. Nonliquid resources include a second vehicle, equipment, tools, livestock (with the exception of nonsalable domestic pets), one-time sale asset conversion, and lump-sum payments.
[27] The entire vehicle is exempt only if used for transportation to work, work activities, or daily living requirements.
[28] The state does not limit the amount of money a unit may save for postsecondary education or business capitalization; however, the unit may only save $1,500 toward the purchase of a new home.
[29] If the vehicle is needed to seek or retain employment, $9,300 of the vehicle's fair market value is exempt.
[30] The asset limit is based on unit size: one person receives $3,000, two people receive $6,000, and three or more people receive an additional $25 for each additional person.
[31] Ohio has eliminated the asset test.
[32] This applies to IDA account holders whose gross household income for the preceding calendar year was less than or equal to 100 percent of the federal poverty limit. For account holders whose income was between 100 and 150 percent of the federal poverty limit, the match rate is $0.75 to $1. For those with income between 150 and 200 percent of the federal poverty limit, the match rate is $.50 to $1.
[33] The limit is reduced to $2,500 if the recipient does not cooperate with his or her case plan.
[34] The participant's employer contributes $1 for every hour the participant works.
[35] A unit may exempt $4,650 of the equity value of a vehicle. After this exemption, if the remaining amount of the value of the vehicle disqualifies the unit from assistance, $1,500 of the equity value of the vehicle is exempted. The entire value of a vehicle to provide necessary transportation of a disabled family member may be exempted.
[36] Vehicles owned by or used to transport disabled individuals, vehicles essential to self-employment, income-producing vehicles, and vehicles used as a home are also exempt.
[37] In addition to one primary vehicle, an assistance unit may totally exclude a vehicle used to transport water or fuel to the home when it is not piped in, a vehicle used to transport a disabled member or SSI recipient in household, or a vehicle used in producing income or as a home; an assistance unit may also exclude $4,650 of the fair market value of a vehicle used to transport members of the unit for education or employment.
[38] $4,650 is exempt for each vehicle owned by a TANF-certified or disqualified household member, and $15,000 is exempt for one vehicle owned by a two-parent family. All licensed vehicles used for income-producing purposes are exempt.
[39] Only deposits from earnings or EITCs are disregarded. Any withdrawals from an IDA account made for non-allowable purposes are counted as a resource.
[40] IDAs are generally matched dollar-for-dollar with funds from private citizens, corporations, banks, communities, or charitable organizations.
[41] The entire equity value of a vehicle used to transport a disabled household member is also exempt.
[42] In addition to the $1,000 asset limit, up to 100 percent of the unit's total gross earnings from the previous month, if placed in a savings account, will not count toward its asset limit.
[43] If the fair market value of the vehicle is greater than $7,500, any equity value greater than $1,500 is counted toward the resource limit.
[44] An unrestricted amount in an IDA (limit one per assistance unit) established through the Assets for Independence Act (AFIA) may be disregarded. Also, recipients may accumulate $2,000 in a Virginia Individual Development Accounts (maximum one per assistance unit) and $5000 in assets held in other types of accounts, including savings, money markets, mutual funds, and stocks (maximum one per assistance unit).
[45] $3,000 held in a savings account or certificate of deposit may also be excluded.
[46] The information in the table refers to the WISCAP IDA program. There are two other IDA programs in Wisconsin for which data on limits, uses, and matching was unavailable.
[47] The $12,000 exemption applies to one vehicle for a single-parent unit and to two vehicles for a married couple.

Notes: "No explicit test" indicates that the state either imposes no income tests on recipients or imposes an income test but the calculation of the test and disregards allowed for the test do not differ from those used to calculate the benefit. See table I.E.3 for information on eligibility standards.

[1] The gross income test does not apply to earnings for recipients receiving the 66.7 percent disregard.
[2] The gross income test does not apply to earnings for recipients receiving the 100 percent disregard.
[3] For two-parent units to be eligible, their gross earned income must be below 150 percent of the federal poverty level and their unearned income must be below 100 percent of the Standard of Need.

Notes: Ongoing eligibility is calculated assuming that the unit found new employment while on assistance, has only earned income, has no child care expenses, contains one adult and no children subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for shelter, and lives in the most populated area of the state.

All amounts are rounded up to the nearest dollar.

[1] The amounts in this table represent the maximum amount of earnings a recipient in various months can have and still be "technically" eligible for assistance in each state. Technical eligibility does not mean that the unit will necessarily receive a cash benefit, but it will have passed all eligibility tests and is eligible for some positive amount. Most states distribute a cash benefit only if it is over $10.
[2] For purposes of the state's earned income disregard, the adult head is assumed to be working 40 hours a week.
[3] Based on the assumption made for these calculations, the recipient is not receiving the state's 90 percent disregard. However, under different assumptions, it is possible that the recipient may receive the 90 percent disregard in the 25th month of combining work and welfare.
[4] Units with full-time employment (generally greater than 30 hours a week) will not receive a cash benefit in the state. There are provisions to provide prorated benefits to Community Service Jobs participants who are also employed part-time at an unsubsidized job. These eligibility determinations are made on a case-by-case basis. Recipients may earn up to $1,462 and still be eligible for nonfinancial assistance.

Note: Some units may be exempt from the family cap policies. See the WRD for more details on exemption policies.

[1] This column describes the number of months a unit must remain off assistance to regain eligibility for a previously capped child. Some states permanently exclude capped children even if the unit cycles on and off assistance, while other states may include previously capped children in benefit and eligibility calculations if the unit has not received assistance for a specified period.
[2] Units subjected to the family cap receive an additional disregard equal to the lost benefit amount. This additional disregard is allowed for each month the member is excluded due to a cap. Additionally, the entire amount of child support collected for a benefit capped child is passed through to the unit and is not counted for eligibility determination or benefit computation.
[3] The unit is exempt from the family cap if it leaves assistance for two months during the 10-month period leading up to the birth.
[4] Any child support received for a child subject to the family cap is treated as exempt income.
[5] In addition to the family cap policy, any child born after December 31, 1998, to an unmarried minor parent is ineligible for cash assistance, regardless of whether the minor was receiving aid at the time of the birth. If the minor received benefits within 10 months of the birth of the child, the child will always be capped. If the minor did not receive benefits within 10 months of the birth of the child, the child will be eligible for assistance once the minor turns 18. Units in which the child is not permanently capped may receive noncash assistance services in the form of vouchers upon request, but they will not be automatically given each month. Receipt is based on need.
[6] The normal increment is the additional amount a unit receives for adding a person to the unit. For instance, a two-person unit that adds a child may receive another $30 each month since it is now a three-person unit. There is no increase in cash benefits for the second child or subsequent children subject to the cap.
[7] The additional child increases the Standard of Need but not the family maximum. If the family has no income, the cash benefit will not increase. However, if the family has income, the benefit may increase but cannot increase higher than the maximum payment for the family size excluding the capped child.
[8] The state provides a flat maximum benefit, regardless of family size. However, the payment standard increases with family size, so the benefit for a unit with income may increase with an additional child, but never beyond the maximum benefit level.
[9] As an interim strategy to discontinue the family cap policy, local departments are being encouraged to request a two-year waiver of this policy from the state secretary. Waivers are expected to be implemented on or around October 1, 2002. However, no information has been obtained on which local departments have or have not applied for waivers.
[10] The money the unit would have received for the additional child will instead go to a third party (e.g., church, charitable organization, relative) to purchase necessary care requirements for the affected child.
[11] Units subject to the family cap receive an additional disregard equal to the first $90 of income received by or on behalf of a capped child in any month.
[12] The family cap only applies to the cash assistance portion of MFIP the additional child would get. The child will still be eligible for the food portion of MFIP.
[13] Units in which at least one adult member of the unit is working (any number of hours) are not subject to the family cap.
[14] After case closure, if the recipient is employed for three months and loses the job by no fault of his or her own, the previously capped child is included in the unit. These units do not receive a new 10-month grace period for any subsequent pregnancies.
[15] The unit will not receive cash for an additional child; however, the unit will receive a voucher for the amount it would have received during the first 36 months to pay for expenses associated with the child. Vouchers are similar to cash. The capped portion of the benefit is distributed every month, divided into two vouchers that can be used at any store to purchase things necessary for the capped child.
[16] Benefits will be provided in the form of vouchers up to the amount of increase in cash benefits the unit would have received for the child.
[17] This period only applies if the family has previously reached the periodic limit of 18 months and the case was closed without a sanction. If the unit reapplies and has not previously reached the periodic limit, or the case was previously closed for a sanction, then the child who was previously subject to a family cap will remain capped until the unit has completed whatever time is left on their 18 month assistance period.
[18] The state provides a flat benefit, regardless of family size.

[1] Recipients may only participate in JOBSTART for a total of six months. If they want to continue receiving assistance after that time, they are placed in the All, except JOBSTART component.
[2] California's TANF funding began December 1996; however, recipients' benefit months did not begin to count against units' 60-month limit until January 1998. Using state funds, California will extend recipients' benefits beyond 60 months if the units received assistance between December 1996 and January 1998. The length of the extension equals the number of months the unit received benefits during this period.
[3] Recipients may apply for an extension to the time limit once their 21 months of assistance have expired. Recipients must reapply for extensions every six months. Recipients may only receive two extensions unless they meet specific criteria (see WRD for information on extension criteria). If recipients are sanctioned during the extension period, they are ineligible to receive benefits again. Units may only receive a total of 60 months, including extensions.
[4] The 36-month time limit applies to assistance units that apply for benefits on or after January 1, 2000. Units that have received benefits before this date are eligible for 48 months of assistance.
[5] The District of Columbia uses local money to fund assistance units that have reached the 60-month lifetime time limit.
[6] Children who do not live with a parent can still receive assistance after their caretaker reaches the 60-month limit.
[7] In addition to the 60-month lifetime limit, units must establish a time frame, with a specific ending date, during which the recipient expects to become self-sufficient (i.e., when income is above eligibility limits). Recipients may select an ending date by laying out plans for a training goal and calculating the time needed to fulfill the activities needed to reach that goal, or select the desired ending date and choose activities that will lead to self-sufficiency by that date. The ending date should remain fixed; it should not be regularly revised or updated. However, the time frame can be extended if funding for activities or supportive services is unavailable. Recipients who fail to demonstrate satisfactory progress or choose not to develop a time frame plan will have their unit's benefits eliminated indefinitely until they sign a time frame plan. Recipients who fail again will have their unit's benefits eliminated for a minimum of six months and thereafter until they sign a time frame plan and complete 20 hours of work or training activity.
[8] Units in compliance with TANF program rules may continue to receive benefits beyond 60 months. If members of the unit have been sanctioned three or more times during their 60 months of assistance, the adult's needs are not considered for benefit computation for an amount of time equal to the length of the adult's last sanction period.
[9] Because of the implementation of a state time limit under a waiver, Nebraska assumed that months in which an individual received assistance did not count toward the federal 60-month time limit. However, the state was notified by the federal government on August 1, 2002, that months of assistance did count against the 60-month limit. Therefore, the state retroactively applied the 60-month time limit to all recipients as of the date TANF began or the first month of receipt under the waiver, whichever was later.
[10] After 60 months, the unit is still eligible to receive noncash assistance through the state's Safety Net Assistance program.
[11] In certain circumstances, a child may be able to continue receiving benefits after the 60-month time limit has expired. Since the time limit follows the adult, a child may enter a new household and become eligible in a new assistance unit.
[12] After receiving 36 months of assistance, the case is closed; however, it is possible to receive 24 additional months of benefits if the unit has not received benefits for at least 24 months and can demonstrate good cause for reapplying.
[13] Although the state does not discuss a federal lifetime limit (60 months), the final TANF regulations, published April 1999, indicate that any months during which a nonexempt head of household receives TANF-funded assistance under a waiver will count toward the federal time limit. Therefore, in addition to the state time limit, a 60-month lifetime limit applies retroactively to all recipients as of the date TANF began or the first month of receipt under the waiver, whichever is later.
[14] Households exempt from or cooperating with program requirements upon reaching their 60th month of assistance will continue to receive benefits at the same level they received under TANF. Households in sanction status when they reach the 60-month time limit are placed in the Child Safety Net Payment Program. The benefit is reduced by 40 percent (the adult portion) and paid through a protective payee (for rent, utilities, and child expenses only). Proof of good cause, exemption status, or one month of compliance will cure the sanction and restore the unit's benefit.
[15] In addition to the total 60-month time limit, individuals are subject to a 24-month time limit in each of the following components: W-2 Transitions, Community Service Jobs (CSJ), and Trial Jobs.

[1] Two-parent families are eligible for only six months of assistance in any 12-month period.
[2] The 24 of 60 months limit applies to nonexempt recipients that have received less than 36 months of assistance during the previous 60 months and are either over age 24 or under 24 with a high school diploma or GED. The 36 of 72 months limit applies to nonexempt recipients that (1) have received benefits for 36 of the previous 60 months or (2) are under age 24, have not completed high school or a GED, are not enrolled in a high school equivalency program, and have little or no work experience.
[3] The 12-month limit applies to nonexempt recipients that (1) did not complete the 11th grade and have 18 months or more of recent work experience, or (2) have either a high school diploma or GED, a certificate from postsecondary school, or a certificate or degree from vocational or technical school, and any work experience. The 24-month limit applies to nonexempt recipients that (1) have not completed the 11th grade and have between six and 17 months of recent work experience, or (2) have completed the 11th grade but not the 12th grade or have a GED, and have completed 17 or fewer months of work experience. The 36-month limit applies to nonexempt recipients who (1) have less than six months of recent work experience and (2) have not completed the 11th grade. Also, when determining the benefit for the remaining eligible individuals in the unit, the following procedure is used: Calculate the countable gross monthly earned income of the disqualified parent or caretaker. Subtract the standard $120 work-related deduction from the earned income. Add the disqualified parent or caretaker’s unearned income. Subtract the following: payments made to other dependents outside the home, amount paid in alimony or child support, and the Budgetary Needs Standard for the disqualified parent or caretaker plus the caretaker’s dependents who live in the home but are excluded from the unit. The remaining income is deemed available to the unit.
[4] Two-parent families in which the principle wage earner is unemployed are only eligible for seven months of assistance in a 13-month period.
[5] After receiving 24 months of assistance, the unit may receive up to 12 months of transitional benefits. The 24 months of ineligibility begins with the month in which the case was closed or the month in which transitional benefits were terminated, whichever is later.

Notes: Exemption policies apply to months in which the state does not count a month of assistance toward the state's time limit (or "stops the clock"). These policies are potential exemptions and may not be granted to all that are eligible. In most states, caseworkers have discretion in applying the exemptions.

If a state has multiple time limits (for example, a periodic limit and a lifetime limit) and applies the exemption policies differently to the time limits, the exemptions in the table apply to the lifetime limit and the exemptions for the periodic limit are footnoted.

The federal government requires that states disregard months during which an adult lived in Indian country or in an Alaskan Native village with an adult unemployment rate of at least 50 percent. Additionally, because time-limit calculations apply only to families that include adults (or minor heads of household), time limits do not apply to child-only units or to any month in which an adult received assistance as a dependent child.

[1] Any months of assistance received in Arizona or any other state before October 2002 do not count toward the time limit.
[2] Three months applies to parents who have child care. If no child care is available, parents caring for children under 12 months old are exempt.
[3] The diversion payment is considered a loan; therefore the recipient must pay back any amount borrowed. Any amount paid back will not count toward the time limit; however, if all or a portion of the amount has not been repaid, the months will count.
[4] If the adult received more than 36 months of payments in another state, all payments received in the other state count toward the time limit. If the adult received less than 36 months of assistance, none of the payments count toward the time limit.
[5] Counties have the option to vary their time limit exemption policies. These policies refer to Los Angeles County.
[6] Minor parents are exempt in months in which they are eligible for, participating in, or exempt from the Cal-Learn program.
[7] If the unit applies for monthly TANF benefits after the diversion period (diversion amount divided by monthly benefit) ends, the state counts one month toward the time limit. If the unit applies during the diversion period, it can choose to count the diversion payment toward the time limit or repay the diversion amount at a rate of 10 percent of the monthly benefit each month until the diversion is repaid.
[8] The exemption does not apply to children subject to a family cap.
[9] Women who are pregnant or have just given birth are exempt if a physician certifies the woman's inability to work. In addition, a woman whose pregnancy ended within six weeks is exempt.

[10] All minor parents are exempt (whether they head the unit or not), provided the minor parent is in high school or earning his or her GED.
[11] To be "unemployable," an adult must (1) be age 40 or older, (2) be unemployed, (3) be fully cooperating with program requirements, (4) have not completed grade 6, and (5) have not been employed over six months in the past five years.
[12] Additionally, the family's countable income must be below the need standard for the family size.
[13] Recipients meeting these exemption requirements will be placed in the non–time limited Children's Program.
[14] High unemployment occurs when the state's unemployment rate exceeds the national average by 2 percent or the state's unemployment rate is 7.5 percent or higher.
[15] Participants who have physical, mental health, substance abuse, learning disabilities, or other such incapacities that make them unable to participate in work activities are eligible for D.C.'s locally funded POWER program. Recipients in POWER are exempt from time limits.
[16] The exemptions apply to both the periodic time limit and the lifetime limit.
[17] Three months applies to parents who have child care. If no child care is available, parents caring for children under 6 years old are exempt.
[18] To be exempt, the individual must have been ill or incapacitated for at least 30 days.
[19] To be exempt, the individual must be unemployed or employed less than 20 hours a week, have had a relationship to the perpetrator of the violence, and have taken action as a result of the domestic violence (such as getting a court order protecting the individual from the perpetrator or living in a domestic violence shelter within the past 12 months). After the first six-month exemption period has ended, the individual may be allowed an additional six-month exemption if the victim has maintained active participation with a domestic violence agency and the agency recommends the additional period. The additional period will not be granted if the perpetrator resides in the same household as the victim.
[20] The head of a one-parent unit must work 30 hours a week, while both parents of a two-parent unit must work a combined total of 35 hours a week to receive the exemption.
[21] The ill/incapacitated/disabled person must be a related child under age 18 or a spouse.
[22] To be exempt, the caretaker relative must attend the postsecondary education program full-time and retain a cumulative GPA of at least 2.5.
[23] To be exempt, the disabled child must be approved for a waiver under the Home and Community-Based Care Program.
[24] An exemption is given for a month in which a unit head is participating in the Employment Retention and Advancement (ERA) project and is part of the experimental group participating in education and training-focused activities. These participants must spend at least 10 hours a week in education and training-focused activities and work at least 20 hours a week.
[25] To be exempt, the minor parent must live in an adult-supervised setting.
[26] Only those months in which the individual is eligible for the state's $900 earned income deduction are exempt (the deduction is allowed for up to six months). This exemption applies only to the periodic time limit.
[27] This group is exempt from the periodic time limit but not the lifetime limit.
[28] Women in their last three months of pregnancy and first month after the birth of the child are exempt from the periodic time limit but not the lifetime limit.
[29] Months in which the individual received assistance in another state and months in which he or she was sanctioned are exempt from the periodic time limit but not the lifetime limit.
[30] Families that received benefits based on incapacity because the second parent or caretaker relative was an SSI recipient are exempt.
[31] An applicant who passes the 20 percent income test is allowed a 35 percent income disregard as a recipient. Recipients eligible for the 35 percent disregard are exempt from federal and state time limits.
[32] An individual with a disability lasting 12 or more months who is filing for SSI and cooperating with the Disability and Entitlement Assistance Program is exempt.
[33] Recipients in this component are exempt from time limits. The criteria for inclusion in this component may include some of the exemptions listed in this table; see appendix 1 for more information on the composition of the component.
[34] Only those months in which the entire unit's benefit is sanctioned are exempt.
[35] To be exempt, minor parents must be living in a supervised setting and complying with a social service plan, or if they are 18 or 19 years old, they must be complying with education requirements.
[36] If the elderly person has reached the 60-month lifetime limit before turning 60, he or she is not eligible for this exemption.
[37] To be exempt, the family must be complying with a safety plan.
[38] To meet this exemption, there must be no other satisfactory alternative plan or care available.
[39] The minor parent is exempt if he or she is attending school and entered in the JOBS system in Education Related to Employment or Vocational Education and Training.
[40] To be exempt, the minor parent must be complying with activities requirements.
[41] Any month that a minor parent under age 19 spends in high school or actively working toward a GED is exempt.
[42] This exemption only applies to months in which sanctions reduce the amount of the benefit to $0.
[43] Months in which the individual is ill or incapacitated for at least 30 days are exempt from the benefit waiting period time limit but not the lifetime limit.
[44] This group is exempt from the benefit waiting period time limit but not the lifetime limit.
[45] Individuals caring for a child under 12 months old are exempt from the benefit waiting period time limit but not the lifetime limit.
[46] Individuals 65 years old and older are exempt from the benefit waiting period time limit but not the lifetime limit.
[47] Months in which the family does not have access to support services are exempt from the benefit waiting period time limit but not the lifetime limit.
[48] Any month in which the family's countable earned income equals or exceeds 173 percent of the Oregon minimum wage counts as two-fifths of a month toward the time limit.
[49] The exemption is limited to three months in a two-year period.

[50] The exemptions for working recipients, cooperating but unemployed recipients, and ill or incapacitated recipients may be used on multiple occasions under multiple criteria, but the total time exempted cannot exceed 12 months.
[51] Two-parent families in which one or both parents are working 55 hours a week in paid employment also qualify. Additionally, a recipient may qualify if he or she is working at least 20 hours a week in paid employment and is engaged in approved employment and training activities so the total work plus education or training hours a week equals or exceed 30 hours.
[52] An individual who has completed the required eight-week job search and, in the first 12 months of cash assistance, has begun a contracted or otherwise DPW-approved employment and training program for 30 hours a week or a full-time postsecondary educational activity may receive this exemption.
[53] A recipient who is exempt from work requirements due to a verified physical or mental disability may receive this exemption if he or she is receiving services that move him or her toward maximum workforce participation.
[54] A victim of domestic violence is exempted for an initial six-month period. An additional six-month period may be granted if a domestic violence counselor verifies the need.
[55] To be exempt, a recipient must be unable to work more than 30 hours a week because of a documented physical or mental incapacity.
[56] Unless otherwise noted, these exemptions apply to both the benefit waiting period time limit and the lifetime limit.
[57] The relative or child must live in the home with the caretaker and require full-time care as determined by a physician or other health care professional.
[58] The exemption is only allowed once in a 12-month period, then a family services counselor must assess the situation before extending the exemption. If the unit is residing in a domestic violence shelter, the exemption lasts throughout their stay.
[59] An individual is defined as “not job-ready” when he or she functions at or below an 8.9 grade level and is participating in a basic or remedial education program.
[60] The exemption applies only to the benefit waiting period time limit.
[61] The exemption applies to both the benefit waiting period time limit and the lifetime limit.
[62] This exemption can continue as long as the recipient contacts an average of 40 employers a month (job search). This applies only to the benefit waiting period time limit.
[63] Individuals caring for a child under 18 months old are exempt from the benefit waiting period time limit but not the lifetime limit.
[64] Women beyond their fourth month of pregnancy are exempt from the benefit waiting period time limit but not the lifetime limit.
[65] Minor parents under the age of 19 who are heading their own unit are exempt from the benefit waiting period time limit (but not the lifetime limit) if they are enrolled in school.
[66] Individuals age 60 and older are exempt from the benefit waiting period time limit but not the lifetime limit.
[67] This exemption is only available to adults who have received 52 countable months of assistance.
[68] For units who received diversion assistance before July 2000, three months are counted toward the lifetime limit.
[69] Up to one year of assistance will count against minor parents who received assistance before reaching their 18th birthday. All months beyond 12 will not count toward the lifetime limit.
[70] This applies to individuals who participate in the state’s State Adult Student Financial Aid (SASFA) program, meet the attendance requirements of their educational institution, and receive a passing grade (no incompletes or “F’s”) in all classes each semester.

Notes: Extension policies apply to months in which the state provides additional benefits to families after they have reached their time limit. These policies are potential extensions and may not be granted to all that are eligible. In most states, caseworkers have discretion in applying the extensions.

If a state has multiple time limits (for example, a periodic limit and a lifetime limit) and applies the extension policies differently to the time limits, the extensions in the table apply to the lifetime limit and the extensions for the periodic limit are footnoted.

The federal government requires that states disregard months during which an adult lived in Indian country or in an Alaskan Native village with an adult unemployment rate of at least 50 percent. Additionally, because time limit calculations apply only to families that include adults (or minor heads of household), time limits do not apply to child-only units or to any month in which an adult received assistance as a dependent child.

[1] To receive an extension, the individual must have received at least 12 of the last 24 months of assistance under a basic hardship, be compliant with JOBS, not have been disqualified for noncompliance, and be certified as not currently employable by a JOBS caseworker.
[2] To receive the extension, the individual must have a temporary physical or mental incapacity that must be reevaluated every 30 days, or a more permanent physical or mental incapacity that must be reevaluated as determined by a physician or licensed mental health practitioner.

[3] The extension applies to individuals who live in a Food Stamp ABAWD waiver county, are compliant with JOBS, are not currently employed, and have not been disqualified from receiving assistance because of noncompliance.
[4] To receive the extension, the individual must be engaged in activities to overcome his or her personal barrier(s). Examples of barriers may include but are not limited to the inability to speak English, needing extensive dental work, or having a learning disability, such as Attention Deficit Disorder.
[5] Benefits are extended if the family experiences circumstances outside its control that prevent the caretaker from participating in work activities or becoming self-sufficient, and the loss of benefits would result in conditions that threaten the health and safety of the family.
[6] Three months applies to parents who have child care. If no child care is available, parents caring for children under 12 months old receive the extension.
[7] The individual must be within six months of completing his or her education or training program.
[8] Counties have the option to vary their time limit exemption policies. These policies refer to Los Angeles County.
[9] The extension is provided to families that have inadequate or unavailable transportation, child care, or housing.
[10] Family instability may be caused by a caretaker's inability to maintain stable employment or his or her inability to care for the children in his or her own home or in the home of a relative.
[11] Extensions are only granted if the total family income is below the state's Payment Standard. Units must also make a good faith effort to comply with employment services.
[12] "Support services" include but are not limited to domestic violence counseling, substance abuse treatment, family planning, and employment training.
[13] The extensions apply to both the periodic time limit and the lifetime limit.
[14] This extension can be used for a maximum of 12 months.
[15] Three months applies to parents who have child care. If no child care is available, parents caring for children under 6 years old receive an extension.
[16] This extension applies to individuals with mental illness, emotional trauma, mental retardation, and physical disability.
[17] The extension is granted if the incapacity prevents the individual from working full time.
[18] The extension is granted if the treatment prevents the individual from working at least 30 hours a week. Barriers to work include treatment for mental health, substance abuse, homeless services, domestic violence, DCFS (child protective services), and vocational rehabilitation.
[19] To receive the extension, the disabled child must be approved for a waiver under the Home and Community-Based Care program.
[20] The services could include family services, homelessness services, or vocational rehabilitation.
[21] Benefits will be extended if the individual suffers from a hardship that keeps him or her from becoming self-sufficient. Examples of hardships may include but are not limited to the following (some of these are included above): domestic violence, physical or mental health problems, substance abuse problems, the inability to find or keep a job, lack of suitable child care, difficult housing situations, or caring for a child with special needs.
[22] To receive this extension, recipients must participate in required activities for 30 hours a week.
[23] A temporary family crisis may include a death of a family member, eviction, a serious illness, or an accident.
[24] The family may also receive an extension for months in which the family was sanctioned. This extension applies to the periodic time limit but not the lifetime limit.
[25] Recipients in this component are exempt from time limits. The criteria for inclusion in this component may include some of the exemptions listed in this table. See appendix 1 for more information on the composition of the component.
[26] The 30 hours a week applies to one-parent families. Two-parent families must participate in activities for 55 hours a week. For one-parent families, 25 of the 30 hours must be in employment; for two-parent families, 45 of the 55 hours must be in employment. Participants must be in compliance in the 60th month as well as for 10 of the last 12 months preceding the 61st month to be eligible for the extension.
[27] To receive the extension, the recipient must have a medical condition for more than 30 days that either prevents or limits him or her from obtaining or retaining employment. If a physician indicates the incapacity limits but doesn't prevent work, the recipient may receive the extension as long as he or she works the number of hours specified by that physician.
[28] To receive the extension, the family must be complying with a safety plan.
[29] To receive the extension, the recipient must be assessed by a vocational specialist or licensed physician as unable to obtain or retain available employment.
[30] The domestic violence extension applies to months in which the assistance unit is fleeing from or receiving treatment for domestic violence or abuse. "Abuse" includes sexual, mental, or physical abuse or battery and applies if the child or the adult is the one subject to the abuse.
[31] A family crisis may include, but is not limited to, a home destroyed by fire, a temporary disability of the payee, the accidental injury of family member, job loss due to a poor economy, or being the victim of a crime.
[32] A family is considered to have insufficient income if its gross income is less than 185 percent of the TANF benefit it would receive. A family is suffering from extreme hardship if it does not have enough money to meet the costs of basic needs (i.e., food, clothing, and housing).
[33] The extensions apply to both the benefit waiting period time limit and the lifetime limit.
[34] Months in which the parent was exempt from activities requirements because he or she was caring for a young child are deducted from the 12-month extension period. For example, if the unit head was previously exempted from activities requirements for three months and then reaches the 60-month time limit, he or she may only receive an additional nine-month extension, provided one of his or her children is under 12 months old.
[35] To receive the extension, a caseworker must determine that the recipient is experiencing a drug, alcohol, or mental health treatment–related hardship.
[36] Hardship extensions are available to all open and reapplication cases. Hardships may include the following (some of these are included above): lack of adequate child care, loss of employment, life-threatening circumstance or emergency situation, medical condition, medical condition of another household member, learning disability, participation in a substance abuse or mental health program, and family/domestic violence. The following criteria is only available to cases open at 60 months: in compliance with NHEP participation requirements. The following criteria is only available to TANF reapplicants who have received at least 60 months of TANF and are in compliance with NHEP requirements: working 30 hours a week, or do not meet any other hardship criteria. An across-the-board hardship extension may be granted if New Hampshire Employment Security has determined the state is eligible for the federal/state cooperative extended benefit program or has a statewide unemployment rate of 7 percent.

[37] Benefits are extended to families if termination would subject the family to extreme hardship. Extreme hardship is defined as one of the following (some of these are included above): periods of temporary incapacity resulting in work deferrals of more than 12 consecutive months that did not allow the recipient sufficient time to gain self-sufficiency; the existence of a current temporary deferral, such as for incapacity due to pregnancy or the need to care for a child under 12 weeks old; the existence of a current temporary deferral due to circumstances such as a lack of transportation or available child care to support work; if participant has been fully compliant with program requirements with no more than one sanction in the previous 12 months and he or she is still unable to obtain sufficient employment; a domestic violence situation renders a recipient temporarily incapable of sustaining the family without continued support.

[38] Individuals considered battered or subjected to extreme cruelty also receive an extension. Battery and extreme cruelty occur when an individual has been physically attacked, sexually abused, raped, threatened with physical or sexual abuse, exposed to mental abuse, or deprived of medical care.

[39] Individuals who are substantially complying with their Personal Responsibility Contract and are unable to obtain or maintain employment that provides a basic level of subsistence (defined as less than the state's maximum Work First payment minus $90 from each worker's income) receive an extension from the benefit waiting period time limit but not the lifetime limit.

[40] A family may receive a hardship extension if a unit member (some of these are included above) has been battered or abused, has suffered a severe illness, has an inhibiting education level, has severe unemployment, has a lack of child care, is participating in substance abuse treatment, has an inhibiting criminal record, is homeless or has substandard housing, has one or more children in the home receiving child welfare services, had inadequate access to employment services during the 60 months, lacks transportation, or has any other situation that makes employment unattainable. Also, benefits are extended for months in which the unit head participates in postsecondary education. These apply to the lifetime time limit but not the benefit waiting period.

[41] Participants in postsecondary education programs may receive an extension to the benefit waiting period time limit but not the lifetime limit.

[42] Recipients caring for children under 72 months (6 years) old may be eligible for the Extended TANF program if an alternative child care arrangement is unavailable as verified by the Child Care Information Services.

[43] To receive the extension, the recipient must works less than 30 hours a week because of a documented physical or mental incapacity.

[44] The extension is provided to families that are homeless or have inadequate or unavailable child care.

[45] The extension applies to the lifetime limit but not the periodic time limit.

[46] The extension applies to the periodic time limit but not the lifetime limit.

[47] The extension applies to the periodic and lifetime limit for minor parents who have not yet completed high school.

[48] Individuals participating in a county-approved training program may receive an extension from the periodic time limit but not the lifetime limit.

[49] Examples of family safety issues are homelessness or domestic violence.

[50] The assistance unit must be in compliance with its personal responsibility plan for the most recent 18 months and have income that is less than the maximum grant for its assistance group size plus the earned income disregard. This applies to both the benefit waiting period time limit and the lifetime limit.

[51] Individuals unemployed owing to high local unemployment may receive an extension from benefit waiting period time limit but not the lifetime limit.

[52] To be eligible for this extension, the recipient must be unable to obtain sufficient employment during last 12 consecutive months before the end of the 60-month limit and can have no more than one sanction since November 1, 1996. The inability to obtain sufficient employment cannot be the result of voluntarily quitting a job. This applies to the lifetime limit but not the benefit waiting period.

[53] This extension applies to the lifetime time limit but not to the benefit waiting period.

[54] This extension can continue as long as the recipient contacts an average of 40 employers a month (job search). This applies to both the benefit waiting period time limit and the lifetime limit.

[55] To be eligible for this extension, the recipient must reside in a county in which he or she receives minimum or mid-level services during the 60th month (or at any time during the 11 countable months immediately preceding the 60th month) of benefit receipt. This applies to the lifetime limit but not the benefit waiting period.

[56] An extension is granted if the following three conditions are met: (1) during the previous month, the parent was employed for no less than 80 hours; (2) during six of the previous 24 months the parent received assistance, he or she was employed for no less than 80 hours a month; and (3) the parent is expected to be employed for no less than 80 hours in the month financial assistance is being authorized for.

[57] Individuals suffering from a hardship may receive an extension from the benefit waiting period time limit but not the lifetime limit.

[58] Clients who experience the onset of a temporary incapacity after the 55th month of assistance may qualify for a one-time extension while undergoing treatment.

[59] Pregnant women (including emancipated minor parents under 18 years old) who will be in their third trimester or have a child under the age of six months during their 60th month of assistance may receive an extension until their child is six months old.

[60] This extension is provided to families who have inadequate or unavailable child care.

[61] Significant barriers include but are not limited to low achievement ability, learning disability, severe emotional problems, or family problems, which include legal problems, family crises, homelessness, domestic abuse, or children's school or medical activities that affect a member of the W-2 group.

[62] The disability, illness, or incapacity must be a permanent condition.

[63] To receive the extension, the individual must be within one year of completing the degree.

Policies across Time, 1996–2003

V. Policies across Time

This chapter of the Databook includes longitudinal tables for selected areas of policy from the years 1996, 1999, 2001, and 2003 (as of July of each year).[21] Although not every policy from the previous sections has a companion table here, data for every year from 1996 through 2003 for each policy can be found in the WRD.

To help users more easily identify changes in policies across time, the changes in policies from one year to the next have been bolded in all the longitudinal tables. Note that because the tables do not represent every year, the changes may have occurred in a year before the bolded year. Information on the when specific changes occurred is available in the WRD.

The following discussion provides more information on the policies included in this section and the specific policies discussed in the tables.

Formal diversion: Table L1 indicates which states have a formal diversion program that diverts eligible applicants or recipients from ongoing TANF receipt by providing a one-time cash payment directly to the family or to a vendor for expenses incurred by the family. Other strategies that states may use to divert applicants from ongoing receipt of cash benefits (such as requiring an applicant to participate in job search or resource and referral services) are not identified as diversion programs in the table.

[21] The 1997 data can be obtained from Welfare Rules Databook: State TANF Policies as of 2001 by Gretchen Rowe with Tracy Roberts and Kevin McManus or from the online WRD database. Data for 1998, 2000, and 2002 can be obtained from Welfare Rules Databook: State TANF Policies as of 2002 by Gretchen Rowe with Victoria Russell or from the online WRD database.

States did not have the option to divert units under AFDC. However, a few states experimented with diversion through waivers. Generally, diversion programs began as demonstration projects in a few counties, and, after TANF, were expanded statewide.[22]

Two-parent eligibility: Table L2 describes states' deviation from the prior federal AFDC rules for two-parent, nondisabled units over time. The key AFDC policies were the 100-hour rule for both applicants and recipients, a 6-out-of-13-quarter work history test, and a 30-day waiting period. "Standard AFDC" describes the states that impose the AFDC rules. "Modified" describes the states that no longer impose all the former AFDC requirements on units but still impose some additional requirements. The specific combination of modified rules is footnoted. States that no longer impose any special requirements on two-parent units are denoted by "None."

Many states began modifying or removing special requirements for two-parent units under waivers. This process continued under TANF, which does not require states to impose any special requirements on two-parent units.

Initial eligibility at application: Table L3 calculates the amount of earned income a three-person unit can receive and still be technically eligible for assistance. "Technically eligible" means that the unit is eligible for assistance but may not actually receive a cash benefit. Most states will not pay out a benefit for less than a specified amount (usually $10), but as long as the unit's potential benefit is positive, it is technically eligible. The calculations in this table are based on the states' income eligibility tests, earned income disregards, benefit computation, and eligibility and payment standards.

[22] Years in which the state implemented a diversion program as a demonstration project in only a few counties are footnoted.

Earned income disregards for benefit computation: Table L4 describes the earned income disregards allowed in determining the net income used for benefit computation. The disregards in this table apply to recipients.[23]

Earned income disregards for benefit computation under AFDC were a standard $120 and 33.3 percent for the first four months, $120 for the next eight months, and $90 thereafter. Through waivers, many states began changing their disregard policies, which often allowed units to keep more of their income and remain eligible for aid. This broadening of disregards continued under TANF, which allows states to determine their own disregard policies.

Maximum monthly benefit for a family of three with no income: Table L5 indicates the benefit that a family of three will receive if it has no income. The benefits are calculated assuming the assistance unit includes one parent and two children, contains no children subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for all shelter costs with no subsidies, and is subject to the benefit standard that applies to the majority of the state's caseload.

Maximum benefits have always varied across states. Benefit computation formulas and payment standards were two policies that states were able to determine under AFDC. The wide variation in states' benefits still exists under TANF, but benefits have changed relatively infrequently across time.

Work-related exemption when caring for a child under X months: Table L6 indicates what age a child must be under for the unit head to be exempt from work-related requirements. The unit head is assumed to be a single parent age 20 or older with a high school diploma or GED.

[23] If units in the first month of receipt (applicants) receive different disregards, they are footnoted. This table does not include disregards related to child care or any other special disregards for units affected by family caps or time limits.

Under AFDC, parents were exempt from the Job Opportunities and Basic Skills Training (JOBS) program if they had children less than 36 months old.[24] Under waivers, many states began reducing the age of the child exemption. Then, with the passage of TANF, the federal government reduced the maximum age for the exemption to 12 months for the state's participation rate calculation. States can exempt units with children younger or older than 12 months, but units with children over 12 months old will be included in their work participation rate denominator. States with waivers also can continue their previous exemption policy under TANF until the waivers expire.

Most severe sanction policy for noncompliance with work requirements for single-parent adults: Table L7 describes the most severe sanction policy for noncompliance with work requirements.

Under AFDC, the worst-case sanction for not complying with work requirements was the removal of the adult for benefit computation purposes. The unit was sanctioned for six months or until compliance. By 1996, a few states had begun to impose more severe sanctions on noncompliant units. These policies continued and expanded under TANF. The federal government requires that all states sanction individuals for not complying with work requirements, but the states are allowed to determine the severity of the sanction.

Asset tests: Tables L8 and L9 describe the asset limits and vehicle exemptions for recipients, respectively. If the tests are different for applicants, they are footnoted.

States have liberalized asset tests over the past several years. Under AFDC rules, the federal government set the maximum amount of assets a unit could retain and still remain eligible at $1,000 of countable assets, with an exclusion of $1,500 of the equity value of a vehicle. During the early 1990s, states began experimenting with higher asset limits and vehicle exemptions through waivers. Under TANF, states determine the maximum allowable level of assets.

[24] States had the option to require JOBS participation of parents with children as young as 12 months old.

Family caps: Table L10 indicates which states have implemented family cap policies. States did not have the option to cap additional children under AFDC. However, a few states experimented with family caps through waivers.[25] TANF neither requires nor prohibits family cap policies.

[25] Years in which the state imposed a family cap as a demonstration project in only a few counties are footnoted.

[1] Counties have the option to vary their diversion programs. These policies refer to Los Angeles County.
[2] Counties have the option to vary their diversion programs. These policies refer to Denver County.
[3] The state's diversion program is related to retaining or obtaining employment, and is only for parents living with natural or adopted children.
[4] Florida has two separate diversion programs. Up-front diversion is for individuals in need of assistance due to unexpected circumstances or emergency situations. Relocation assistance is available for individuals who reside in an area with limited employment opportunities.
[5] Florida has three separate diversion programs. An assistance unit may receive a one-time payment of up to $1,000 in Up-Front Diversion or Relocation Assistance, up to the amount needed to relocate, or a one-time $1,000 payment of Cash Severance Diversion. The unit is ineligible to receive assistance for three months after receiving Up-Front Diversion and for six months after receiving Relocation Assistance or Cash Severance Diversion. Up-Front Assistance is for individuals in need of assistance owing to unexpected circumstances or emergency situations. Relocation Assistance is available for individuals who reside in an area with limited employment opportunities and experience one of the following: geographic isolation, formidable transportation barriers, isolation from extended family, or domestic violence that threatens the ability of a parent to maintain self-sufficiency. Cash Severance Diversion is available to TANF recipients if they meet the following criteria: are employed and receiving earnings, are able to verify their earnings, will remain employed for at least six months, have received cash assistance for at least six consecutive months since October 1996, and are eligible for at least one more month of TANF. Up-Front Diversion and Relocation Assistance do not count toward time limits. Cash Severance Diversion does not count toward time limits if the payment is made in a month in which the unit receives a TANF payment. If the payment is made in a month in which the unit does not receive a TANF payment, the Cash Severance Diversion payment counts as a month toward the time limit.
[6] Iowa is conducting a demonstration project that provides diversion assistance to its clients.
[7] Diversion payments are only provided to caretaker relatives or parents who are employed or looking for work.
[8] On July 1, 2003, the statewide Diversionary Assistance Program was repealed, along with several other statewide programs. These programs were replaced with a block grant given to the counties called the Consolidated Fund. Counties will still be able to fund Diversion Assistance from the Consolidated Fund, but will not be required to.
[9] Montana is conducting a demonstration project in eight counties that provides diversion assistance to its clients.
[10] Diversion payments are only provided for employment-related expenses at the discretion of the welfare department.
[11] Applicants for WFNJ/TANF must participate in New Jersey's diversion program, Early Employment Initiative, if they (1) have a work history that equals or exceeds four months of full-time employment in the last 12 months, (2) have at least one child, (3) appear to meet TANF eligibility requirements, (4) are not in immediate need, and (5) do not meet criteria for a deferral from work requirements. Participants receive a one-time lump-sum payment and are required to pursue an intensive job search for 15 to 30 days while their WFNJ/TANF application is processed. If participants obtain employment and withdraw their application, they are eligible to receive a second lump-sum payment to assist in the transition to employment. If no employment is secured, the applicant is referred back to the WFNJ/TANF agency for cash assistance.
[12] The diversion payment is only available to assist applicants in keeping a job or accepting a bona fide offer of employment.
[13] New York has three types of diversion payments: Diversion Payments (for crisis items such as moving expenses, storage fees, or household structural or equipment repairs), Diversion Transportation Payments (for employment-related transportation expenses), and Diversion Rental Payments (for rental housing).
[14] Counties have the option to vary their diversion programs. These policies refer to Cuyahoga County.
[15] Individuals must be employed or have a bona fide offer of employment to qualify for diversion assistance.
[16] To qualify for the state's diversion program, the assistance unit must meet one of the "Crisis Criteria": (1) the caretaker or second parent loss of employment in the process month, application month, or two months before application; (2) a single parent must have experienced a loss of financial support from a spouse within the last 12 months owing to death, divorce, separation, or abandonment AND have been employed within 12 months of the application or process month; (3) the caretaker or second parent has graduated from a university, college, junior college, or technical training school within 12 months of the application or process month AND is underemployed or unemployed; or (4) the caretaker and/or second parent is employed but faces the loss or potential loss of transportation and/or shelter OR faces a medical emergency temporarily preventing them from continuing to work.
[17] The diversion payment is considered a loan to assist with expenses related to obtaining or maintaining employment and it must be repaid. Repayments are expected within 12 months but may be extended to 24 months. The loan may be paid back in cash or through a combination of cash and volunteer community service (valued at the higher of the state or federal minimum wage).

Note: Standard AFDC rules for two-parent units: a 100-hour limit on work for both applicants and recipients; applicants must have worked in at least six of the last 13 calendar quarters before application; and applicants must have been unemployed for a minimum of 30 days before application.

[1] The special restrictions considered in this table include limits on work hours for applicants and recipients, work history requirements, and waiting period restrictions. The combination of restrictions does not, however, include any variation in state programs from special time limits that apply only to two-parent units.
[2] Modified rules for two-parent units: six of the last 13 quarters work history.
[3] Modified rules for two-parent units: 100-hour work limit for applicants only, six of the last 13 quarters work history, and 30-day waiting period.
[4] Modified rules for two-parent units: 100-hour work limit for applicants and four-week waiting period.
[5] Modified rules for two-parent units: Must be connected to the workforce, which includes one of the following: (1) currently working at least 20 hours a week, (2) receiving Unemployment Compensation, (3) unemployed or working less than 20 hours a week and has earned $500 within the six months before application, (4) receiving retirement benefits, (5) has received disability benefits based on 100 percent disability in any of the last six months.
[6] Modified rules for two-parent units: 30-day waiting period.
[7] Modified rules for two-parent units: seven-day waiting period.
[8] Modified rules for two-parent units: 100-hour work limit for applicants, applicant must have earned at least $1,000 during the 24-month period before the month of application, and 30-day waiting period.
[9] Modified rules for two-parent units: 100-hour work limit for applicants, 130-hour work limit for recipients, six of the last 13 quarters work history, and 30-day waiting period.
[10] Modified rules for two-parent units: six of the last 13 quarters work history and 30-day waiting period for recipients.
[11] North Dakota does not provide benefits to two-parent nondisabled units.
[12] Modified rules for two-parent units: 100-hour work limit for applicants, 100-hour work limit for recipients, and applicants must have a combined (both parents) gross income over the past six months equal to at least $1,500. Parents must not have terminated employment, reduced hours worked, or refused a job offer within the previous six months (without good cause).

Note: Initial eligibility is calculated assuming the unit contains a head who is employed at application, has only earned income, has no child care expenses, contains one adult and no children subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for shelter, and lives in the most populated area of the state.

[1] The amounts in this table represent the maximum amount of earnings an applicant can have and still be “technically” eligible for assistance in each state. Technical eligibility does not mean that the unit will necessarily receive a cash benefit, but it will have passed all eligibility tests and is eligible for some positive amount. The amounts have been rounded to the nearest dollar, so in some cases the family may be able to earn slightly less than the amount in the table and in other cases it may be able to earn slightly more. Most states only distribute a cash benefit if it is over $10.
[2] Applies to units that have received assistance for no more than two months in a lifetime. For units applying for their third and subsequent months of benefits, the eligibility threshold for a family of three is $1,362.
[3] For purposes of the state’s earned income disregard, the adult head is assumed to be working 40 hours a week.
[4] The All, except VIEW units made up the majority of the caseload in this year.
[5] Units with full-time employment (generally greater than 30 hours a week) at application will not receive a cash benefit in the state. However, applicants may earn up to $1,331 and still be eligible for nonfinancial assistance.
[6] Units with full-time employment (generally greater than 30 hours a week) will not receive a cash benefit in the state. There are provisions to provide prorated benefits to Community Service Jobs participants who are also employed part-time at an unsubsidized job. These eligibility determinations are made on a case-by-case basis. Recipients may earn up to $1,356 and still be eligible for nonfinancial assistance, however.
[7] Units with full-time employment (generally greater than 30 hours a week) will not receive a cash benefit in the state. There are provisions to provide prorated benefits to Community Service Jobs participants who are also employed part-time at an unsubsidized job. These eligibility determinations are made on a case-by-case basis. Recipients may earn up to $1,462 and still be eligible for nonfinancial assistance, however.
[8] The values only include one amount per state (the policy affecting the largest percent of the caseload), and the eligibility threshold for Wisconsin is included in the calculation.

Notes: Only earned income disregards are described in the table. Child care disregards and other special disregards, such as deductions for units subject to time limits and family caps, are not included.

The table describes benefit computation disregards for recipients. If the disregards differ for applicants, it is footnoted.

[1] This disregard is also applied to applicants who have received assistance in one of the previous four months.
[2] Recipients are eligible for the one-time 100 percent disregard if they become newly employed or report increased wages acquired after approval.
[3] The six months in which the extra $900 is disregarded need not be consecutive; however, the recipient may use this extra disregard in no more than six months over the course of his or her lifetime.
[4] Recipients are eligible for the one-time 100 percent disregard if they find employment of 35 hours a week within 30 days following initial approval for TANF. If work is not found within 30 days, the recipient is ineligible to ever receive the disregard again. An additional 100 percent disregard is available to units for three months when the unit’s case is subject to closure because of increased earnings and the individual is employed for at least 25 hours a week at the federal minimum wage or higher. The recipient may not have already received the six-month disregard, unless there has been at least a 12-month break in receipt of TANF benefits. The three-month disregard may be received more than once during the 60-month TANF benefit period provided that there are at least 12 consecutive months in which a family does not receive TANF benefits before the family reapplies for assistance. Two-parent units may disregard 100 percent of earnings for the first six months, $120 and 33.3 percent in the next 12 months, and $90 thereafter.
[5] This disregard only applies to recipients who become employed while receiving TANF. Applicants and recipients who gained employment before receiving TANF are allowed to disregard $120 and 33.3 percent of remainder for the first four months, $120 for the next eight months, and $90 thereafter.
[6] The 100 percent disregard is only applicable once every 12 months, even if employment is lost and then regained. Applicants are not eligible for the 100 percent disregard in the first month of benefit computation; they may disregard 50 percent of earnings only.
[7] Two-parent units may disregard all earnings in excess of 59 hours a week (if federally subsidized child care is available, else 39 hours a week), $250 and 50 percent in the first 24 months. Thereafter, they may disregard $250 and 50 percent of the remainder. The disregard for earnings in excess of the participation requirement only applies to recipients for the first 24 months of benefit receipt, for both single- and two-parent units.
[8] Two-parent units may disregard all earnings in excess of 35 hours a week for one parent and 24 hours a week for the other parent and $225 and 50 percent in the first 24 months. Thereafter, they may disregard $225 and 50 percent of the remainder. The disregard for earnings in excess of the participation requirement only applies to recipients for the first 24 months of benefit receipt, for both single- and two-parent units.
[9] The 100 percent disregard is available once in a lifetime and may be received only if the recipient is newly employed at a job that is expected to be permanent for more than 20 hours a week.
[10] The formula for months one through eight equals A*(A/B).5, where A = Min[earnings after initial disregard, B] and B = Employment Incentive Limit; for months nine and 10 it equals A(A/B).3, where A = Min[earnings after initial disregard, B] and B = Employment Incentive Limit; and for months 11 and 12 it equals A(A/B)*.1, where A = Min[earnings after initial disregard, B] and B = Employment Incentive Limit. Beginning in the 13th month, there is no additional disregard.
[11] If a household member receives the 50 percent disregard for four consecutive months, the remaining months of the 12-month disregard cycle continue regardless of employment status. If a household member receives the 50 percent disregard for less than four months, then the 12-month cycle begins again at 50 percent upon reemployment. If a household member receives the 50 percent disregard and voluntarily terminates employment without good cause, the remaining months of the 12-month cycle continue as if the individual were employed. In addition, a $90 disregard is applied to the earned income of a parent who has reached his or her lifetime time limit.

[12] A $90 disregard is applied to the earned income of a parent who has reached his or her lifetime time limit.
[13] The four months need not be consecutive. Once the recipient has received four months of the 90 percent disregard, he or she is not eligible to receive the disregard again until the TANF case has been denied and remains denied for one full month and 12 calendar months have passed since the denial. The 12-month ineligibility period begins with the first full month of denial after the client used the fourth month of the 90 percent disregard.
[14] This policy was confirmed during the 2003 verification.
[15] Married couples with a child in common may disregard $400.

Note: Maximum benefits are calculated assuming the unit contains one adult and two children who are not subject to a family cap, has no special needs, pays for shelter, and lives in the most populated area of the state.

[1] Applies to units that have received assistance for at least two months in a lifetime. For units receiving the first and second months of benefits, the maximum benefit for a family of three is $712.
[2] The benefits in these components are based on the wages earned by individual recipients.
[3] The values only include one amount per state (the policy affecting the largest percent of the caseload).

[1] This table refers to single-parent unit heads over 21 years old.
[2] The caretaker loses this exemption after retaining it for 12 cumulative months.
[3] The caretaker loses this exemption after retaining it for 12 cumulative months. While exempt, the caretaker may be required to participate in job-readiness activities.
[4] The parent may only receive exemptions, in any combination, for 12 months in his or her lifetime. All exemptions the parent is eligible for and uses accumulate toward the 12 months.
[5] This exemption is limited to one child during a period of continuous TANF eligibility, where continuous is defined as receiving welfare without a break for at least six consecutive months.
[6] Counties have the option to vary some activities exemptions; this exemption applies to Los Angeles County. The recipient may receive this exemption only once; however, he or she may also receive a limited exemption for a second or subsequent child under six months old.
[7] Counties have the option to vary activities exemptions; these policies refer to Denver County. The exemption does not apply to those who have received benefits for 24 or more cumulative months.
[8] The exemption applies only if the child is not subject to a family cap.
[9] Recipients may be required to attend classes or other activities.
[10] The exemption is limited to once in the recipient's lifetime.
[11] This exemption does not apply to units in which the youngest related child is age 13 or older.
[12] Although exempt from activities requirements, persons caring for children under 12 months old could be asked to participate in counseling, health-related education, group activities, and forums with information about child care and educational opportunities.
[13] If the participant has a newborn child, absence from activities is determined using the standards of the Family Leave Act of 1993. The maximum time for one parent is 12 workweeks in any 12-month period and for two parents is 12 total workweeks of leave for both parents.
[14] The individual is exempt through the month the child turns 1 year old.
[15] The exemption is limited to 12 months in the recipient's lifetime.
[16] This is a one-time exemption for the first child only.
[17] Recipients in this component are automatically exempt from activities requirements. To be included in this component, recipients have to meet certain criteria. See appendix 1 for more information on the composition of the component.
[18] Mothers are exempt from activities requirements for three months postpartum.
[19] Recipients meeting this exemption criteria are placed in the Non–Time Limited Assistance component. See appendix 1 for more information on the composition of the component.
[20] Recipients who conceive a child while on assistance are exempt only until the child is 12 months old. Recipients meeting this exemption criteria are placed in the Family Assistance Program (FAP) component. See appendix 1 for more information on the composition of the component.
[21] Recipients who have received 39 or more months of assistance will not receive a child care exemption. Recipients who conceive a child while on assistance are exempt only until the child is 12 months old. Recipients meeting this exemption criteria are placed in the FAP component. See appendix 1 for more information on the composition of the component.
[22] Parents with children under the age of 2 are required to participate in counseling and vocational assessment.
[23] The exemption may be extended if a physician certifies it is medically necessary for the parent or child.
[24] The exemption may last for no more than 12 months in a recipient's lifetime and it may not last for more than three months for any one child unless the social services official determines to extend the exemption for up to the total 12 months.
[25] This applies to caretakers with children under 5 years old, unless the caretaker or parent is working more than 30 hours a week.
[26] Native Americans who live in the Confederated Tribe of the Grande Ronde Service District are excluded from JOBS participation.
[27] The exemption does not apply to individuals under the age of 25 with no high school diploma or GED.
[28] The parent is exempt from working but must participate in the Reach Up program.
[29] If the recipient cares for a child under 24 months old, work requirements may be modified or deferred. A participant's work requirement cannot be deferred for this reason for more than 24 months in a lifetime. If the participant has exhausted the 24 months and has a child under 13 weeks old, then he or she is automatically exempt from all work requirements.
[30] Recipients caring for children subject to a family cap are only exempt while the child is under six weeks old.
[31] The exemption applies only to the birth of a first child. The recipient is exempted for six months after the birth of any additional child (the six months include any time the recipient chooses to be exempt during pregnancy).

Note: "Adult portion of benefit" describes the portion of the benefit the sanctioned individual would have received. Since the table only represents sanctions for single-parent adults, in all cases the sanctioned individual is an adult.

[+] The unit is sanctioned for a specified number of months, or until the sanctioned individual complies with the activity requirements, whichever is longer.
[1] The adult portion of the benefit is calculated by subtracting the child-only need standard for a one-person household from the adult-included need standard for a two-person household.
[2] The participant will be removed from the JOBSTART program but will be eligible to participate in the non-JOBSTART component.

[3] For the seventh and subsequent months of noncompliance, the caseworker has discretion to either reduce the unit's benefits by 50 percent or close the case. If the case is closed, the unit may reapply for its full benefits, but the application will be pending until the unit has complied with requirements for two weeks.
[4] Counties have the option to determine the amount and duration of sanctions. These policies refer to Denver County.
[5] After the three-month penalty period, benefits are not restored until the sanctioned individual has complied. Assistance may still be provided to children under 16 in the unit; these benefits are issued to a protective payee.
[6] For the second and subsequent sanctions, cash assistance may still be provided to the children in the unit who are under age 16; these benefits are issued to a protective payee.
[7] The sanctioned parent must also sign a family investment agreement and complete 20 hours of eligible education or work activities to become eligible again. The sanction continues until the parent fully complies.
[8] Recipients in this component are not required to participate in work activities; therefore, they have no sanctions.
[9] The shelter costs are paid directly to the vendor; any remaining benefit amount is reduced by 30 percent of the Transitional Standard. Vendor payments continue for six months after the month in which the parent become compliant.
[10] If noncompliance continues for more than one month after the end of the sanction period, the case is closed and the unit must reapply for benefits. If requirements are met, the case remains open and only the adult portion of the benefit is removed for the duration of the sanction or until compliance.
[11] The Adjusted Payment Standard refers to the new benefit amount once the adult portion is removed.
[12] If noncompliance continues after three months, the case is closed and the unit must reapply for further assistance.
[13] The program participant is placed on probation if he or she has not met program requirements. At the end of the probationary period, if standards have not been met or an overall GPA of 2.5 has not been achieved, the department may take action to terminate an individual's participation in the Educational Works Program.
[14] After the three-month sanction period, the client is reevaluated. If he or she is still not in compliance on the date of evaluation, he or she is sanctioned for another three months.
[15] If the adult is noncompliant for three or fewer months, only the adult portion of the benefit is removed. If noncompliance continues after four months, the entire unit is ineligible for benefits until compliance.
[16] If the adult is noncompliant for one month or less, only the adult portion of the benefit is removed. If noncompliance continues after one month of reduced benefits, the case is closed.
[17] This applies to noncompliance that occurs after the first 24 months of assistance. For noncompliances that occurs within the first 24 months of assistance, the needs of the sanctioned individual are not included for benefit calculation.
[18] If the individual is noncompliant for one to six months, 110 percent of the parent's benefits is reduced from the unit's. For months seven through 12 of noncompliance, 120 percent of the parent's benefits is reduced from the unit's. Months 13–18, 130 percent reduction. Months 19–24, 140 percent reduction. Following 24 months of noncompliance, the reduction is decreased to 100 percent of the parent's benefit, but the entire remaining benefit must be made to a protective payee. The individual is sanctioned until he or she is in compliance for two weeks.
[19] The entire unit is ineligible if the adult is in noncompliance for two or more months. If the adult is noncompliant for less than two months, only $100 of the benefit is removed.
[20] The sanction remains in effect until the individual is compliant for two weeks; after two weeks of compliance, benefits are restored to their pre-sanction level and the individual is paid retroactively for the two weeks of compliance.
[21] Wisconsin has four components (see appendix 1 for description of components). When a recipient is sanctioned and permanently ineligible for benefits in W-2 T, Community Service Jobs, or Trial Jobs, the unit may receive benefits again if they become eligible for one of the other two. There is no permanent sanction for individuals in Unsubsidized Employment.

Note: This table captures the asset limits for recipients. If the state designates a different asset limit for applicants, it is included as a footnote.

[1] Units including a member age 60 years and over may exempt $3,000; all other units exempt $2,000.
[2] The asset limit for applicants is $1,000.
[3] Households including an elderly or disabled person may exempt $3,000; all other units exempt $2,000.
[4] The asset limit is based on unit size: one person receives $2,000, two persons receive $3,000 and three or more receive another $50 for each additional person.
[5] The asset limit for applicants is $2,000.
[6] Only liquid resources will be considered for eligibility determinations. Liquid resources include cash, checking and savings accounts, CDs, stocks and bonds, and money market accounts.
[7] The asset limit for applicants and for recipients who do not sign a self-sufficiency pact in Missouri is $1,000.
[8] The asset limit is based on unit size: one person receives $4,000 and two or more persons receive $6,000.
[9] The total limit is $3,500; however, only $1,500 of that amount can be in liquid resources and only $2,000 can be in nonliquid resources. Liquid resources include the (convertible) cash value of life insurance policies, cash, stocks, bonds, negotiable notes, purchase contracts, and other similar assets. Nonliquid resources include a second vehicle, equipment, tools, livestock (except nonsalable domestic pets), one-time sale asset conversion, and lump-sum payments.
[10] The asset limit is based on unit size: one person receives $5,000 and two or more persons receive $8,000.
[11] The asset limit is based on unit size: one person receives $3,000, two people receive $6,000, and three or more receive an additional $25 for each additional person.
[12] Ohio has eliminated the asset test.
[13] The limit is reduced to $2,500 if the recipient does not participate in the required activities of his or her case plan.
[14] In addition to the $1,000 asset limit, up to 100 percent of the unit's total gross earnings from the previous month, if placed in a savings account, will not count toward its asset limit.
[15] $3,000 held in a savings account or certificate of deposit may also be excluded.

[E] Equity value of the vehicle.
[F] Fair market value of the vehicle.

1 Vehicles used as a home, to produce self-employment income, to transport a disabled family member, or to participate in an approved work activity are also exempt.
2 Applicants may only exempt $1,500 of the equity value of a vehicle.
3 One vehicle per household is exempt if equipped for a handicapped person, used to obtain medical treatment, or used for employment.
4 The unit may exempt $9,500 of the equity value of any vehicle or the entire value of one vehicle used to transport a handicapped person.
5 If the vehicle is used to look for work or to travel to work or education and training, the unit may exclude $4,650 of the value. If the vehicle is not used for these purposes, $1,500 of the equity value will be excluded. If the vehicle is used more than 50 percent of the time to produce income or as a dwelling, it is totally excluded.
6 The value of one specially equipped vehicle used to transport a disabled family member is also exempt.
7 The value of one specially equipped vehicle used to transport a disabled family member and vehicles with a fair market value of under $1,500 are exempt.
8 When the assistance unit owns more than one vehicle, the one of greater value is exempted.
9 Any other vehicles used over 50 percent of the time for employment, needed for medical treatment, used as a home, or specially equipped for use by a handicapped person are exempt.
10 Recreational vehicles are not excluded
11 The state compares the value of the vehicle to two standards: $10,000 of the fair market value and $5,000 of the equity value. If the value of the vehicle exceeds either limit, the excess counts toward the asset limit; however, if the value of the vehicle exceeds both limits, only the excess of the greater amount counts toward the asset limit.
12 The value of any additional vehicle necessary for employment is also exempt.
13 $4,650 of the fair market value of the unit's second vehicle is exempt.
14 Recreational vehicles (unless used as a home), all terrain vehicles (ATVs), and other off-road vehicles are not exempt. Additionally, industrial vehicles (i.e., heavy haulers, pulpwood trucks, etc.) are exempt as long as they are used for income-producing purposes over 50 percent of the time, or as long as they annually produce income consistent with their fair market value. Determination of whether to count a vehicle is made on a case-by-case basis.

[15] $1,500 of the equity value of the unit's second vehicle is exempt.
[16] All income-producing vehicles are also exempt.
[17] The entire vehicle is exempt only if used for employment, training, or medical transportation; any motor vehicle used as a home is also exempt.
[18] Units with two adults may exempt up to $4,650 of the fair market value of a second vehicle if it is essential for work, training, or transportation of a handicapped individual.
[19] When public transportation is available, the value of the first vehicle is exempt. When public transportation is not available, the value of one vehicle per participant involved in work activity is exempt.
[20] The entire vehicle is exempt only if used for transportation to work, work activities, or daily living requirements.
[21] If the vehicle is needed to seek or retain employment, $9,300 of the vehicle's fair market value is exempt.
[22] A unit may exempt $4,650 of the equity value of a vehicle. After this exemption, if the remaining value of the vehicle disqualifies the unit from assistance, $1,500 of the equity value of the vehicle is exempted. The entire value of a vehicle to provide necessary transportation of a disabled family member may be exempted.
[23] Vehicles owned by or used to transport disabled individuals, vehicles essential to self-employment, income-producing vehicles, and vehicles used as a home are also exempt.
[24] A vehicle owned by a child at least 14 years old is exempt if the child is at least a part-time student and a part-time worker, a portion of the payment for the car comes from the child's income, and the car's trade-in value does not exceed $2,500.
[25] $4,650 of the fair market value of a vehicle is exempt if used to transport members of the unit for education or employment. The unit may also exempt a vehicle used to transport water or fuel to the home when it is not piped in, a vehicle used to transport a disabled member or SSI recipient in the household, and a vehicle used as a home or to produce income.
[26] In addition to one primary vehicle, an assistance unit may totally exclude a vehicle used to transport water or fuel to the home when it is not piped in, a vehicle used to transport a disabled member or SSI recipient in household, or a vehicle used in producing income or as a home; an assistance unit may also exclude $4,650 of the fair market value of a vehicle used to transport members of the unit for education or employment.
[27] $4,650 is exempt for each vehicle owned by a TANF-certified or disqualified household member. All vehicles used more than 50 percent of the time for income-producing purposes are exempt.
[28] $4,650 is exempt for each vehicle owned by a TANF-certified or disqualified household member. All vehicles used for income-producing purposes are exempt.
[29] $4,650 is exempt for each vehicle owned by a TANF-certified or disqualified household member and $15,000 is exempt for one vehicle owned by a two-parent family. All vehicles used for income-producing purposes are exempt.
[30] The entire equity value of a vehicle used to transport a disabled household member is also exempt.
[31] If the fair market value of the vehicle is greater than $7,500, any equity value greater than $1,500 is counted in the resource limit.
[32] The $12,000 exemption applies to one car for a single-parent unit and to two cars for a married couple.

[1] In addition to the family cap policy, any child born to an unmarried minor parent after December 31, 1998, is ineligible for cash assistance (regardless of whether the minor was receiving aid at the time of the birth). These units may receive noncash assistance services in the form of vouchers upon request, but they will not be given vouchers automatically each month. Receipt is based on need.
[2] The state provides a flat maximum benefit, regardless of family size. However, the payment standard increases with family size, so the benefit for a unit with income may increase with an additional child, but never beyond the maximum benefit level.
[3] As an interim strategy to discontinue the family cap policy, local departments are being encouraged to request a two-year waiver of this policy from the state secretary. Waivers are expected to be implemented on or around October 1, 2002. However, no information has been obtained on which local departments have or have not applied for waivers.
[4] The family cap only applies to the cash assistance portion of MFIP that the additional child would get. The child will still be eligible for the food portion of MFIP.
[5] Nebraska is conducting a demonstration project in five counties that subjects units to a family cap.
[6] The state provides a flat benefit, regardless of family size.

Appendix 1:
Component Descriptions

The WRD and this book define a state's TANF program as having a component when the state divides its entire caseload into mutually exclusive groups that are treated differently across more than one policy area. These groups are usually defined by more than one characteristic. Not every state uses components. For those that do, the following table describes how recipients are divided among the components, how long recipients can remain in the various components, and any interaction between the components.

Appendix 1: Component Description

State	Name	Duration	Description	Maximum time in component[1]	Interaction
Arizona	All, except JOBSTART	11/95 - present	Nonexempt recipients	No limit	The goal of JOBSTART is to place recipients in jobs that lead to unsubsidized employment. Those who do not reach unsubsidized employment after 6 months may receive benefits under the All, except JOBSTART component.
	JOBSTART	11/95 - present	Participants are randomly selected nonexempt recipients who have completed high school/GED and are not enrolled in postsecondary education. The state subsidizes employers to hire JOBSTART participants on a full-time basis.	6 months
California	Nonexempt	7/97 - present	Nonexempt recipients	No limit	Recipients change components only when something happens to change their exemption status.
	Exempt	7/97 - present	Recipients who are (1) a parent/relative, an aided parent of an unaided child, a pregnant woman, or an adult in a Refugee Cash Assistance unit and (2) receive SSI, In-Home Support Services, State Disability Insurance, or Temporary Worker's Compensation. Also exempt are unaided nonparent caretakers.	Until recipient no longer meets exemption characteristics.
Connecticut	Time-limited units	1/96 - present	Units subject to the 21-month time limit	No limit	Recipients change components only when something happens to change their exemption status.
	Time-limit-exempt units	1/96 - present	Units exempt from the time limit	Until recipients no longer meet the exemption criteria

Appendix 1: Component Description

State	Name	Duration	Description	Maximum time in component[1]	Interaction
Indiana	Nonplacement track	5/95 - 3/97	Recipients who are not job-ready or are exempt from activities	No limit	If a Placement Track recipient reaches the 24-month time limit and has served the 36 months of ineligibility, s/he may be placed in the Nonplacement Track. Placement Track recipients may be moved to the Nonplacement Track if they are determined unable to work under existing circumstances.
	Placement track	5/95 - 3/97	Job-ready recipients	24 months
Massachusetts	Exempt[2]	11/95 - present	Recipients who are one of the following: receiving SSI; disabled; caring for a relative with a disability; pregnant with a child who is expected to be born within 120 days; caring for a child under the age of 2; teen parents under age 20 meeting living arrangement requirements and attending school; or recipients age 60 or older. This component is exempt from the reduced need and payment standards, time limits, and work requirements.	Until recipients no longer meet the exemption criteria	Recipients change components only when something happens to change their exemption status.
	Nonexempt	11/95 - present	Nonexempt recipients	No limit
Montana	Pathways	2/96 - 6/01	New applicants who do not opt for the JSP (diversion) are required to participate in Pathways. Pathways requires a family to complete a Family Investment Agreement (FIA) and limits benefits for adults to 24 months. After the time limit expires, the family enters the CSP.	24 months	New applicants have the option of participating in JSP. If they do not choose to participate in JSP, they are placed in Pathways. If the new applicant chooses to participate in JSP and at any time needs monthly benefits, the unit is placed in Pathways. After receiving 2 years of assistance under Pathways, the unit is required to move to the Community Service Program (CSP). The unit must meet all the requirements of the CSP component to continue receiving benefits.
	Community Service Program (CSP)	2/96 - 6/01	Recipients whose time limits have expired in Pathways move into CSP. CSP requires that recipients participate in CSP activities.	No limit
	Job Supplement Program (JSP)	2/96 - 6/01	Intended to divert applicants from welfare receipt by providing support services (such as Medicaid and child care assistance) and an employment-related cash payment. This program is completely optional and participants must still meet AFDC/TANF eligibility requirements.	n.a.

Appendix 1: Component Description

State	Name	Duration	Description	Maximum time in component[1]	Interaction
Nebraska	Time-limited assistance	11/95 - present	Units in which the adult member(s) are able to work.	No limit	Recipients change components only when something happens to change their ability to work or to change their exempt status.
	Non-time-limited assistance	11/95 - present	Units where the adult member(s) are mentally, emotionally, or physically unable to work. Recipients are placed in this component as a result of being exempt from activities requirements. See table III.B.1 for a partial list of these exemptions.	Until recipients no longer meet the criteria
New Hampshire	New Hampshire Employment Program (NHEP)	3/97 - present	The NHEP provides financial assistance to units with dependent children who are cared for by a parent or relative who is able bodied for employment.	No limit	Recipients change components only when something happens to change their ability to work.
	Family Assistance Program (FAP)	3/97 - present	The FAP provides financial assistance to units with dependent children who are cared for by a parent or relative who is unable to work due to a physical or mental disability, or are cared for by a relative other than a parent who is not receiving assistance. Recipients are placed in this component as a result of being exempt from activities requirements.	Until recipients no longer meet the criteria

State	Name	Duration	Description	Maximum time in component[1]	Interaction
North Carolina	Work First Active	7/96 - 11/99	Counties are responsible for assigning individuals to components. Most individuals who are nonexempt from activities requirements are assigned to the Work First Active component. This component specifically includes the following individuals: (1) an individual who has been sanctioned for noncooperation with Child Support; (2) at least one parent in all Unemployed Parent families; (3) a Work First Active participant who has transferred from another county; (4) an individual whose family has been granted an extension for Work First Assistance; (5) a caretaker who is employed at least 30 hours per week regardless of the age of the youngest child; and (6) a caretaker whose youngest child is age 5 or older.	Limited to 24 months	Recipients are generally placed in Work First Active, unless they are exempt or waiting for an activity assignment. Once the unit becomes nonexempt or is assigned to an activity, they move to Work First Active.
	Work First Preparatory	7/96 - 11/99	Individuals are assigned to Work First Preparatory when they are subject to activities requirements and are waiting to begin active participation.	Based on county resources, assignment to Work First Preparatory should be for a limited time.
	Pre-Work First	7/96 - 11/99	Individuals who are exempt from activities requirements (whether temporarily or permanently) are placed in Pre-Work First.	Until recipients no longer meet the exemption criteria.
Oregon	All, except JOBS Plus	1/96 - present	Recipients not participating in the JOBS Plus program	No limit	*
	JOBS Plus	1/96 - present	Recipients volunteer for the JOBS Plus program, which provides recipients with on-the-job training while paying their benefits as wages from a work-site assignment.	*
Tennessee	Time-limited units	7/99 - present	Units that are subject to the time limit.	No limit	Recipients change components only when something happens to change their exemption status.
	Time-limit-exempt units	7/99 - present	Units that are exempt from the state time limit. These include child-only units and units where the head is disabled, caring full-time for a disabled family member, or over age 60.	Until recipients no longer meet the exemption criteria

State	Name	Duration	Description	Maximum time in component[1]	Interaction
Virginia	Virginia Initiative for Employment not Welfare Program (VIEW)	7/95 - present	All nonexempt recipients that are required to participate in employment activities (unsubsidized, subsidized, community service)	24 months	Recipients change components only when something happens to change their ability to work.
	All, except VIEW	7/95 - present	Recipients who are exempt from VIEW. Recipients are placed in this component as a result of being exempt from activities requirements.	No limit
Wisconsin	W-2 Transitions	3/97 - present	Individuals who have been determined not ready for unsubsidized employment and unable to participate in other employment positions for reasons such as an individual's incapacitation or the need to remain in the home to care for another family member who is incapacitated or disabled	24 months	Recipients should always be placed at the highest level of employment participation possible. Therefore, recipients move between components as appropriate. Time limits may be extended on a case-by-case basis.
	Community Service Jobs (CSJ)	3/97 - present	Individuals who are not ready for immediate regular employment, particularly where attempts to place a participant in an unsubsidized job or Trial Job have failed	24 months
	Trial Jobs	3/97 - present	Individuals who are job ready but are not able to obtain an unsubsidized job	24 months
	Unsubsidized Employment (UE)	1/98 - present	Individuals who are employed at the time of application or who have a strong employment history and skills. Includes individuals who are capable of obtaining employment, are currently in an unsubsidized job, or were previously assigned to a subsidized employment position. These recipients are not subject to either federal or W-2 time limits. Individuals in this component do not receive cash benefits, but case management and some support services are available.	No limit

Note: Only those states with clearly delineated components are included in this table.

Where “No limit” is listed for “Maximum time in component,” it is assumed that units in this component are bound by state time limits. See tables IV.C.1 and IV.C.2 for information on the maximum time recipients are allowed to receive assistance in the state.

* Data not obtained.
[1] For more information on work exemptions and time limit exemptions, see tables III.B.1, IV.C.3, and IV.C.4. For more detail, see the Welfare Rules Database.
[2] In Massachusetts, the exempt component makes up the majority of the caseload.
