Three Things You Don’t Want to Miss at Our November 5th Housing Finance Symposium

The Urban Institute’s Housing Finance Policy Center and CoreLogic are co-hosting the second annual Data, Demand and Demographics Symposium on Wednesday, November 5 from 8:00 to 4:00 pm. This is a housing finance gathering you don’t want to miss and our limited seating is filling up fast with only 13 days left, so register today.

We’ve put together an absorbing day, full of speakers, topics and presentations that will spark conversations and new ideas and offer up three things you want to be present for:

1. Early insights and the newest data. Following a breakfast reception, we’ll hear Reflections on the Midterm Elections, a discussion between Gene Sperling (former director, National Economic Council, White House) and Rick Lazio (former U.S. Representative, R-NY) and then a presentation on Tumultuous Times in the Housing Market from CoreLogic Deputy Chief Economist Sam Khater.

2. Innovative and timely topics. Our luncheon speaker, Lewis Ranieri, founding partner and chairman of Ranieri Partners is well known for his pioneering involvement in securitizing mortgages. And four expert-packed 45-minute panels will cover:
   - Demographics: Impacts on Housing and Tenure Decisions with representatives from HUD, the National Council of La Raza, Columbia University and the Urban Institute.
   - Financing Rental Housing with representatives from Freddie Mac, the National Multifamily Housing Council, Beekman Advisors, Amherst Securities and the Federal Housing Finance Agency (FHFA.)
   - Single Family Financing with experts from the Mortgage Bankers Association, Genworth, Freddie Mac, Quicken Loans and the Milken Institute.

3. Top thinkers and housing finance stakeholders. This intimate, tailored one-day symposium brings together the best minds in housing finance and gives them the opportunity to share and refine innovative policy ideas. The broad spectrum of stakeholders that work regularly with the Urban Institute and CoreLogic – government agencies, industry players and trade associations, advocacy groups, analysts, academics etc – will be in attendance, ensuring a robust and compelling discussion.

We’re confident you’ll get a lot out of the program. If you haven’t registered yet, sign up today. If you’re already registered, please forward this post to your colleagues.
